LILY LANGTRY, BACK IN AMERICA, AFTER FIVE YEARS

FUTURE YANKEE RIBBONED DANDY

—Lily Langtry.

NEW YORK, Sept 28.—A heribboned, beruffled, dainty and dandy male American-ess.—Ed. of it.

This was the picture of the American citizen of the future, as painted by Lily Langtry, now Lady De Bathe, when she returned to America today, after an absence of five years. Here is what the men are going to wear before long, according to the Jersey Lily:

Tight pink or blue or green satin trousers of knee breeches.

Satin tailed coats, colors according to taste.

Ruffled, lacy, soft shirts with long lace wristbands.

Feathered beaver bonnets, like the kind one used to see in the "costume" drama.

Colored leather pumps with buckles or colored bows with satin spats.

Stockings or lace neck pieces.

Just get that privy in your mind's eye and multiply it by American "hustle." Oh, yes, she is quite serious about it.

"You don't believe it?" said Lady de Bathe. "Well it's coming. Men are surely going to quit wearing the ugly clothes they do now and go back to a former period for their wear. They will look much better in satin and colors, and they are beginning to realize it. They like it, which is plainly shown at the fancy dress balls.

"Why, I believe so much in it that I have started a club in London to further the movement. Men are eager for the reform in their dress and they will go back to the costumes of the French court of the eighteenth century for their models.

Lady de Bathe is a suffragette, but she isn't militant. She thinks militant suffragism has set back the cause in England five years.

TALK PLANS FOR DEMONSTRATION STRIKE MONDAY

LAWRENCE, Sept. 28.—It was announced at the I. W. W. headquarters this afternoon that a telegram had been received from Vincent S. John, national secretary, sanctioning the Lawrence strike.

LAWRENCE, Sept. 28.—At a long meeting of delegates from the forty-six nationalities of the local I. W. W. today it was voted to submit to the big mass meeting to be held this afternoon two resolutions.

The first resolution calls for a demonstration strike Monday of twenty-four hours' duration of all the I. W. W. members in the city. This is to take place Monday because that is the opening day of the trial of Ettor and Giovannitti at Salem.

The second resolution is, whether the strikers will return to work Tuesday or will continue the twenty-four hour demonstration strike indefinitely.

Up to this noon it was thought that the bulk of the strikers would return to work Monday, but the vote of the delegates this morning puts a new aspect on the situation.

The delegates constituting what is called the "lock-out committees," met in Lexington Hall on Lawrence street and were in session four hours.

May Call Out 15,000.

The gravity of the propositions required long discussion. If the "demonstration strike" is voted for Monday it may call out 15,000 I. W. W. members, which might result in tieing up the mills so that 30,000 operatives would be out for the day.

The police believed that the vote of the "lock out" committee to put the resolutions might mean a clash at the mass meeting this afternoon.

Fifty per cent. of the I. W. W. membership is Italian and is so far in favor of a strike.

The other half comprises the other forty-five nationalities, like Syrian, Franco-Belgian, Russian, Polish and so on. The forty-five "other" nationalities have voted to return to work Monday.

Look for Sharp Debate.

So a resolution for all to stay out Monday may cause fiery debate at the mass meeting. The police made arrangements to have reserves and regulars on hand in

U. S. INTERVENTION IN MEXICO URGED BY THE SENATE SUB-COMMITTEE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—Intervention in Mexico by the United States to protect Americans and American interests is to be recommended by the sub-committee of the United States Senate which has been investigating affairs relating to Mexico for the past two years, according to reports here today. The sub-committee has practically finished its labor and is preparing its report, which will be voluminous. Evidence brought before the investigators is said to have proved conclusively that no American money was used to finance the Orozco rebellion, but that Yankee money financed the Madero revolution. The report will mention two large corporations in this connection.

Girl's Story of Dual Life Posed Here as Foss' Daughter

Why "Vera Dowling" Steals

FRANCES HOLLENDER ALIAS "VERA DOWLING"

Young Woman Arrested in New York Declares She Was in Love with Prominent Boston Youth.

"Vera Dowling," the remarkable young woman, who achieved notoriety in Boston last year by posing as a daughter of Governor Foss and as a friend of Eleonora Sears, and was sentenced for obtaining many hundreds of dollars worth of jewelry from exclusive firms, has succumbed again to what is believed to be a remarkable instance of dual personality, and is facing similar charges in New York.

She declares her real name is Frances Hollender, and that Chicago is her home. She says:

I am a misunderstood person. It is true that I was arrested in Boston and served a term in the reformatory. But I was made to take those jewels. Of my present predicament I will tell the truth. I did obtain possession of the gems from Bernstein's Sixth avenue place, but I can easily pay for them

MARKS OVER EYE ON BODY

The body of an unidentified young woman was picked up at 1 p. m. today in Boston harbor at Point Shirley, Winthrop. There was a mark over one of the eyes of the dead woman.

The woman was fully dressed. She wore a colored apron. Her hat was gone. She was about thirty-five years old.

The body was discovered by two young men, who saw it floating on the Boston side of Shirley Gut. They towed the body ashore and placed it on a float.

The body might have floated down from Dorchester or Boston proper. Those who saw the body thought it had been in the water several days.

GIANTS GOT PENNANT BY FAVORITISM SAYS FOGEL

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—A remarkable signed statement by Horace S. Fogel, president of the Philadelphia National League Club, published in the Chicago Evening Post today asserts that favoritism on the part of umpires gave the league pennant this year to the New York Giants. The statement is issued in support of Fogel's suggestion that American League umpires for the World's series be chosen by the president of the National League and vice versa, a move which Fogel asserts would go a long way to correct the conditions.

FOGEL REVIEWS OWN TROUBLES.

Fogel reviewed his own troubles with the umpires, in which he asserts that his team got the worst of it, especially when it played New York. He referred to the suspension last season of Sherwood Magee, and, then stated that other clubs have complained to him that they have lost games to New York through favoritism by an umpire.

Fogel says he first thought his troubles were due to vindictiveness on the part of President Lynch. Then said, he observed carefully and was led to the belief that Lynch was only a figurehead. The power behind Lynch, Fogel says, is the New York club.

He predicted that Lynch would not long be president of the league. Fogel said he wanted to hear complaints from other team owners after he had tried to fight Lynch and failed.

"First one and then another squealed," the statement says, "no club other than New York had a chance to win the pennant as long as Tom Lynch was president.

"Why?" I asked.

"Because," said Charley Ebbetts of the Brooklyn Club, "the umpires won't give us a chance, they want to stand in with New York, figuring that as long as they are in good standing with New York they are secure in their positions, the New York Club being the power behind the Lynch throne."

Gave Giants Games.

Fogel then says he asked a number of magnates how many games they thought had been given to New York by the umpires. Five owners whom he asked answered from two to six. The statement continues:

But say that each of seven clubs suf-

case the expected throng of 12,000 to 13,000 should become turbulent.

It was decided at the committee meeting that voting at the mass meeting should be done by raising the right hand.

National Organizer Carlo Tresca, who presided at the committee meeting, gave out this statement regarding violence and the police:

"If the police use violence in Lawrence they must be held responsible for all violence in return and all resulting disturbance.

"I have advised and am still advising the strikers not to use violence, but also not to tolerate it."

9,000 Still Out.

Tresca is from Pittsburgh, a man of about thirty-five years, tall, broad-shouldered, alert and self-confident. He is the typical I. W. W. leader.

He will be one of the speakers tomorrow afternoon when the I. W. W. parade arrives outside of Immaculate Conception cemetery. While a committee is putting flowers on the grave of Annie Lo Pezzi, Tresca, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Charles Webber and Charles Smith of the local police and William Dunfee of Haverhill will speak.

When the mill gates were opened at 6:45 a. m. today, for the Saturday's half-day to begin, the police estimated that 1,500 strikers had returned to work out of the 10,000 or more who quit to demonstrate their sympathy with Ettor and Giovannitti. This would leave over 9,000 still out.

At the Ayer mill, one of the American Woolen Company's plants, 1,500 of the strikers came to the gates to return to work. They were told there was no work today, but to return Monday.

Will Let Employes Return.

From this it was assumed that the American Woolen Company plans to let its employes return to their jobs if they wish.

At the Ayer mill the usual roster is 4,000 hands. But only 300 menders were let into the plant today.

At the big Wood mill (American Woolen Company), where 6,000 hands usually work, the payroll has of late run to 2,000 names. But about half that number was at work today.

At the Washington mill of the American Woolen Company's string, 1,000 strikers returned to their machines today. With the 2,000 who stayed through yesterday, they made a total of 3,000 working today.

ETTOR IS SECRETLY REMOVED TO SALEM FROM LAWRENCE JAIL

LAWRENCE, Sept. 28.—Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo M. Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso were transferred secretly at 4 a. m. today from the jail here to the Essex county jail, Salem, by automobile. The trial of the I. W. W. leaders and Caruso begins Monday.

Only the authorities knew of the transfer until long after it had been accomplished. The three prisoners were awakened before daylight, and told to prepare for the journey to Salem. When he was called, Ettor said to Deputy Sheriff Fred N. Allen:

"I thought you would be after me in a few days."

The men were handcuffed, Caruso, who is accused of the murder of Anna Lo Pezzi, in the centre, and Ettor and Giovannitti, held as accessories, on his right and left, respectively.

The prisoners were placed in a seven-passenger automobile and bundled in robes to their chins, for the morning air was frosty. The men were cheerful. It was their first meeting in months, and they chattered in Italian all the way to Salem. Deputy Sheriff Abbott accompanied the men, with Special Constable Albert Thorpe, Clarence Williams, a mechanician, and the chauffeur.

The journey was without incident. Neither Giovannitti nor Caruso said anything in English. Ettor was accosted most of the time in animated conversation with his fellow-prisoners. Soon after entering the automobile, however, he said to the deputy sheriff:

"I thought you'd be after me a few days ago. I looked for something or other from you, but I didn't think you would awaken us so early."

Then he laughed and added, "But the auto ride pays for it all."

At the Essex county jail in Salem, the prisoners were handed over to the custody of Sheriff Johnson and locked up.

Miss Ada J. Powers, who left her fiance, Arthur L. Bascom waiting at the Copley Square Hotel with a minister, and jilted him, is still ill today at her Summer home in Allerton and cannot be seen.

"This affair has been terrible for us all," declared Miss Powers at her home in Allerton. "It is the face of all the criticism that may come upon us I can only say that there are times when each individual must decide what is best in his or her own case, even though it seem wrong to the rest of the world. There will be no wedding."

B. & M. ADMITS POOR SERVICE

The annual report of the Boston & Maine railroad admits the service is unsatisfactory but explains it by mentioning "rehabilitation" and "additions."

Louis D. Brandeis maintained before Chairman Charles A. Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission that the service has been impaired by discharges of men in various departments.

Superintendent W. C. Kendall denied that reduction of force had curtailed the service.

On account of the dispute between Mr. Brandeis and Superintendent Kendall before Chairman Prouty, the report of the Boston & Maine is regarded as unusually timely. In his annual statement, President Mellen, referring to the prospect of common stock dividends, says:

"The rehabilitation of the property, the addition to its long platform, equipment and stations, will require at least two more years to complete, and in the meantime the operation of the same must continue to be unsatisfactory to the management and the patrons it serves.

"The full effect of the economies expected will not be available, and the net results in consequence will not be flattering; but it is believed the property will be left, under existing conditions, to fully earn the dividends now paid, and probably, if conditions continue as favorable as at the present time, an early slight disbursement may be anticipated at about the close of each fiscal year."

The principal figures in the report compare as follows:

	1912	1911
Gross	$45,800,302	$44,118,064
Oper. exp.	25,987,999	25,227,932
Net	10,901,009	9,486,391
Oth. income	969,796	929,758
Total net	11,902,556	10,398,129
Charges	10,612,106	10,240,172
Bal. sr. chgs.	1,290,247	155,958
Dividends	1,167,151	1,808,781
Surplus	177,761	*1,652,983

*Deficit, made up out of surplus set earned of previous years.

Total stock and funded debt of owned and leased roads outstanding June 30 was $190,311,590, on which dividends and interest paid during the year amounted to $8,609,808, averaging 4.45 per cent.; against $188,219,540, $8,758,407 and 4.82 per cent. and $180,567,990, $8,783,272 and 4.87 per cent. respectively in 1910-11 and 1909-10.

DR. WRIGHT HELD ON SMUGGLING CHARGE

Dr. James H. Wright of No. 1563 Beacon street, Brookline, arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes on a complaint charging that he "knowingly and fraudulently failed to declare" certain articles to the United States customs officials on his return from Europe on the Laconia, September 11, was held in $500 for Thursday. On appraisal the goods were considered to be worth $1,100. Dr. Wright is on the staff of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

BRANDEIS AGAIN HITS N. H. ROAD

Louis D. Brandeis today continued to assail the retrenchment policy of the New Haven Company since it assumed control of the Boston & Maine, when the railroad bearing before Interstate Commissioner Prouty was resumed at the Federal building.

Mr. Brandeis declared that the many delays in shipments of freight over the road of which merchants and manufacturers are complaining are due to the wholesale discharge of employes.

He secured the admission from Superintendent Kendall of the Boston & Maine, that the dropping of freight clerks who checked up shipments at many of the points made it impossible to trace the goods en route.

That $1,000,000 a Day.

Vice-president Buckland of the New Haven had a little fun, however, with Mr. Brandeis, who seeks to show that it is the decreased force of men and the consequent lack of efficiency that causes the delays. "We are trying to save part of that $1,000,000 a day that you recommended," said Buckland. This caused a laugh in which Mr. Brandeis joined.

Buckland referred to Brandeis' statement that he could show the railroads how to save a million a day by efficient management.

Mr. Brandeis read from records in the "advance rate case," an estimate prepared by the Boston & Maine of the additional wage increase for 1911, based on the business of 1910. "The Boston & Maine estimate of this added labor cost was $2,963,000, but the stockholders got a melon at $1,641,872. The traffic in 1911, he said, was $1,500,000 more than in 1910, that is, the gross revenue.

"Poorer Service to Public."

"Now what I want to know," said the attorney, "is what became of that $1,000,000. Can you give any explanation of the reduction in transportation expenses other than the fact that men and cars and engines cut off, or both? Are you not giving poorer service to the public?"

"I think so," responded Mr. Kendall. "If we could buy a locomotive capable of hauling 30 per cent. more tonnage than an old one, we figure that that is an increase of 30 per cent. in our operating efficiency, even though it means fewer trains." He added that the Boston & Maine has bought thirty new locomotives, which are now in service.

ESSEX COUNTY G. O. P. CLUBS HEAR SPEECH BY TAFT

President Taft, at Beverly today, had one of the busiest days since his election began. After a golf game with John Hays Hammond he motored to Gloucester where he had luncheon with Mr. Hammond and met Sir George Reid, high commissioner for Australia.

After luncheon the President reviewed a parade of the Grand Army Veterans of Essex County and attended a reception. Afterwards he motored back to Beverly to deliver a speech to a visiting delegation from Republican clubs of the county. This was his first political address since his nomination. Congressman A. P. Gardner of Massachusetts was a caller this afternoon and lobbied President Taft received the visiting club delegates.

NOVEL SWINDLING SCHEME CHARGED TO WOMAN IN COURT

Helen Cole, an attractive woman of thirty-five years, was arraigned in court today accused of practicing a novel scheme of swindling people.

She was found in her cell with wounds on her neck and hands, believed self inflicted. Her alleged schems was as follows: She would meet a man, rush up and with outstretched hands, tell him that she had been living a few blocks from his home, and that she had borrowed two dollars. All worked well, so 'tis said, until she met Herbert F. Forsaith and said she had been living two doors north of his house, and he remembered that a Chinese laundry was located there.

PINKHAM INQUIRY INTO HONORS' DEATH

To ascertain the cause of the death of Benjamin O. Honors, Swampscott town treasurer, who died last night at his home, No. 342 Humphrey street, Swampscott, where he lived alone, Medical Examiner Pinkham of Lynn has begun an investigation. When Dr. H. K. Glidden arrived, he found the lifeless body of Honors on the floor of his room, and made out a death certificate saying that death was due to heart disease. Under the law, Dr. Glidden should have notified Medical Examiner Pinkham. It is for that reason the latter is acting in the matter. Honors was sixty-five and leaves one son, John R. Honors. As Honors, Holden & Company, Honors conducted a coal business in Lynn, with an office on Union street, that city.

GIRL TELLS OF DUAL EXISTENCE

Just how I get it, but it is in a wholly honorable way.

Some years ago I was sent to a convent in Baltimore. I then went to Boston to complete a course in music. I was studying there when I met two young men. One I need not name but, since you already know of the father of the other I'll tell you. This other man is "Bat" McGettrick. He and the other man were students and I owe much to both. To one I owe this "past record of a thief"—to the other all that I have to live for.

Through this unnamed young man I met several people I now know to be undesirable. I was a mere tool in their hands. They took advantage of my love for this man and, standing behind me, forced me to go down town and "fool some of those wise ones in the stores." I went, for I saw it pleased them, and I wanted to be just as smart as they.

They told me how I resembled the twin daughters of Governor Foss and how easy it would be for me to go into a store and order several thousand dollars' worth of jewels. I did as they ordered. Then I went to my hotel and waited.

Tells of Boston Cases.

The clerk came with the jewels, learned I lived there and sent the packages upstairs. I was instructed to leave the hotel by those people who held this influence over me, and thus I obtained the valuables. We tried the same thing again and succeeded. Urged a third time to do it, I was too bold, I suppose, and got caught.

I was tried and sentenced, and it was then Mr. Edward T. McGettrick, my counsel, came to the front. His father had been an assistant district attorney in Boston.

"Bat" pleaded my case. I was sent to the asylum on Long Island. I was supposed to be insane. I was examined by the doctors at this Long Island institution and being declared sane again, was released the day after arriving there.

Eight weeks ago I came to New York. I use my correct name now, though it is true I was known as Vera Dowling in Boston.

"Wanted to See Life."

I came to New York because I wanted to see life and excitement. I have always wanted to live in hotels, where one is independent to come and go as one pleases. I got all these pretty things without paying for them, but I thought I would be able to pay sometime. I did not think it was stealing.

Representing herself as the wife of a wealthy Lynn, Mass., man, she obtained several expensive gowns from a Fifth avenue establishment and by similar manner obtained finery from other houses.

Several years ago she was known as Revere as Sarah V. Dowling. She had worked as a nurse in several Boston hospitals, and at one time was employed in a hospital in Chelsea.

Posed as Mrs. Lew Fields.

In New York she is charged with impersonating Mrs. Lew Fields and several members of the "400." Miss Dowling was arrested when she went to the costuming establishment of Mme. Cohen, No. 167 Fifth avenue. At the Hotel Astor the police found six gowns and many other costly articles of dress in her rooms. At a restaurant in Times square she had checked two more gowns and a hat.

Detectives found that she had been staying at the King Edward Hotel on West Forty-seventh street. Trunks containing fifty gowns were being held by the management for her bill of $50.

Vera Dowling was arrested at the Hotel Lenox, in Boston, in August, 1911. Two months before she had dropped into a restaurant in Times square and picked out a pendent, saying she would come back in a few days with "Papa Fess" to buy it. When stock-taking time came around, two other pendants were missing, and she was suspected.

While she was awaiting trial on that charge she was arrested again as the girl who had gone into Bigelow" Kennard & Company's store, represented herself as Dorothy Parker, a friend of Miss Elinor Sears, and slipped out with a $1,000 diamond ring.

When arraigned in the West Side court in New York, Miss Dowling wore a white gown over a white silk dress, the costume set off with a large black velvet hat with white pompoms, and black velvet shoes with silver buckles. She admitted the clerk she was wearing had been obtained from McCutcheon & Co., and handed it over to a representative of the firm.

Former Assistant District Attorney Felix W. McGettrick made the following statement today:

"My son and I acted as counsel for Miss Dowling. When I took her case I had not been an assistant district attorney for two years."

NEW TEST FOR DAKOTA DAN

"Dakota Dan" Russell has found an unexpected witness who has come forth voluntarily to see if he can identify him as the real Daniel Blake Russell he knew thirty years ago when he delivered newspapers to Senator Russell, half of whose fortune of $500,000 the ranchman is fighting for.

This man, who lives in Wareham, and who has so far refused to give his name, accosted Mr. Stoddard on the way from the courtroom and asked him a few questions about a mail box that hung on a gate at the Russell place, which "Dakota Dan" quickly answered. It was arranged that tomorrow he should meet Dan again in the presence of witnesses and ask him every question he could think of as to the boyhood days of the real Daniel Blake Russell. Later he will be called to the witness stand in the hearing before Master Pevey at East Cambridge, which has been put over until Monday.

Says Dan Is Her Nephew.

The first evidence in the will contest directly connected with the charge made by Dan's lawyer, William R. Scharton, that a conspiracy may be afoot to deprive his client of a fortune, was presented to the court yesterday, when Mrs. Ida Lynde Leech said that she and Mrs. Sarah Lynde Crafts, her mother, and an aunt of Daniel Blake Russell, who declares Dan is her nephew, had been approached by a detective named Galloupe shortly after "Dakota Dan's appearance in Melrose in 1908, and shown a picture purporting to be that of the claimant.

The detective, the witness said, asked them to see if she could identify the picture, and when she remarked that it bore a likeness to "Tom" Lynde, an uncle, whom Daniel Blake Russell is said to have resembled, her mother said that the square chin was a marked characteristic of the Lynde family. Galloupe replied, according to the witness:

"Oh, no; he's a big, illiterate French-man, who can neither read nor write. We know who he is, and all about him—he's a French-Canadian."

"Almy's Side."

Attorney Scharton charged that after the arrival of "Dakota Dan" in Melrose to claim his heritage, Executor Almy, knowing him to be the true heir, disseminated, and caused to be disseminated, false statements concerning his client, for the purpose of prejudicing persons who would be likely to recognize "Dakota Dan" as the son of Senator Russell. In his cross-examination of the witness he sought to connect Detective Galloupe with the estate, or Executor Almy. The witness testified:

"When the detective came to our house, he said that he represented neither Almy's side nor the side of 'Dakota Dan,' but was merely a newspaper writer after the truth."

"By the way," interrupted Scharton, "I notice that you say he said 'Almy's side,' and not the side of William C. Russell or the estate."

"That's the way he put it," answered the witness.

Among the inquest witnesses called were Woods, his son-in-law, Harry Pierce; Dr. G. H. Francis, who was called to attend the dying Goldrop, and Medical Examiner Harry M. Cutts.

NEW CHARGES AGAINST DOW

Stephen R. Dow, the bankrupt broker, who obtained unsecured loans aggregating $250,000 from several copper companies of which he was president, offered to resign from the Boston Stock Exchange, it was learned today. The committee of the exchange before which he appeared refused to accept the resignation, and ordered a thorough inquiry. It is asserted, however, on excellent authority, that had the question been put to a vote then and there, Dow would have been expelled.

At the session of ten days Dow will have an opportunity to state his side of the case.

The entire liabilities, those familiar with the situation claim, will not exceed $500,000. This includes the bankrupt broker's indebtedness to the Dow companies, to Stock Exchange members and to the customers of Stephen R. Dow & Co.

New charges are to be made to the District Attorney's office by the stockholders of the Franklin, North Lake, Indiana and Algonquin copper companies.

Amos M. McLean, a lawyer, who holds thirty shares of North Lake, has paid two visits to the office of the Suffolk County prosecutor, but was forced to wait until today to see Assistant District Attorney Webber, who will investigate the failure of Dow's firm and will probably put the case before the Grand Jury at the October session.

Dow went to his office at No. 60 Congress street yesterday, but left at noon for his home in Brookline.

A protective committee may be formed for the purpose of securing the interests of the stockholders in the Dow copper companies.

Dow has had other entanglements besides business troubles. In 1902 he filed a divorce suit against his wife, Marie W. Dow. The following month she died a cross libel charging him with infidelity.

He withdrew his appearance, was defaulted and a divorce was granted his wife on statutory grounds. His wife secured the custody of their boy. In 1903 Dow married Miss Amy Niles Gaskill, who had been named in the divorce proceedings, the marriage being performed in the Back Bay by the Rev. Edward A. Horton.

HALE ASKS WILSON TO OPPOSE MAYOR

Matthew Hale, Massachusetts State chairman of the Progressive party, has addressed a letter to Woodrow Wilson, calling upon him to oppose the candidacy of Mayor Fitzgerald for the United States senatorship in order to respond to the support of the "Fitzgerald-Lomasney machine." Mr. Hale asks Governor Wilson to "repudiate the 'Fitzgerald-Lomasney machine.'"

REVERE COMMUTERS HELD UP BY FIRE

All trains on the main line of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad were delayed for a half hour early today while firemen fought a fire in an empty freight car on the Boston & Maine tracks near the big Bath House. Several lines of hose were strung across the tracks and commuters were held up from 7:30 until 8. The fire destroyed one freight car and damaged two others.

Astor's First Day at Work Like Any $15 a Week Clerk

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Vincent Astor, who is worth $75,000,000 in his own right, will work as hard as any $15 a week clerk in managing the immense estate left by his father, Colonel John Jacob Astor, who was lost with the Titanic.

Sitting at his desk today in front of a three-foot pile of letters, young Astor outlined his plans. It was his first day of work. He will work through until 4:30 in the afternoon. He will not let affairs of any kind to interfere with his business.

Young Astor went from his home to his office. No. 23 West Twenty-sixth street, where he will conduct all of his business. A reporter was waiting for him there.

"In six weeks, you know, I will be of age," he said, as he tore open letter after letter, gave it a quick glance, marked it for future reference and placed it aside. "Then I will assume control of all of the business. In the meantime, I am going to familiarize myself with every detail."

Exit Old-Fashioned Woman "All Self Now," Says Author

Mrs. Rida Johnson Young Urges Work and Reading to Correct Slothful Lives.

MRS. RIDA J. YOUNG.

By ADA PATTERSON.

Mrs. Rida Johnson Young, the author, is famous for her types, particularly for her types of women. The law of cause and effect brought about the question, "What is the most common type of woman?" Her answer toppled the ancient woman of her high pedestal and ignored the modern woman, with her clear-cut ideas and her courage in living up to them.

"The most common type of woman that I know is the selfish woman."

"Do you think women are more selfish than men?"

"Yes, in material matters. They are very selfish about their possessions. A man will give liberally of money and material things. When he is selfish it is in a mental sense. He doesn't want his purposes thwarted nor his ambitions hampered. Women are cruelly selfish as to their own belongings and what they want for belongings—to selfish as the cat that fights when you want it to leave its warm, soft corner."

Waste Time and Talent.

"You don't mean that the good, old-fashioned, unselfish mother has vanished?"

"You unconsciously said so yourself when you applied the term 'old-fashioned' to her. If she hasn't vanished she appears to me to be in the minority. Most of the women I know are selfish. They are wasters of time, of talent, of self. They spend the mornings, from half past eight to noon, in various 'treatments,' massage and baths and scalp rubs and face manipulations and manicures. They lunch with some of their own kind. In the afternoon they go from one shop to another to see the new models. They dine and go to the theatre. That is their day.

"But these women are rich, and the average woman isn't rich. The average man, you know, earns thirty dollars a week. His wife cannot be such a waster as you describe."

"The wife of the clerk imitates the rich woman, just as the rich woman, without position, imitates the exclusive set. I know of nothing that can be done for them because they are satisfied. They like the life of the 'waster.'

"But some of them must be dissatisfied with such emptiness. Suppose you suggest a way out for them."

"Their need is intellectual independence. They are so dependent upon their husbands for ideas as for money. They might take an interest in other lives. That will get them out of themselves if they really want to come. They can take soul excursions into the big world by reading about its problems and think of a way, even if it be a wrong way, to solve them.

Why Not Settlement Work?

"They might do settlement work, though I am not an enthusiast. Charity work waits always to be done, of course.

"A good course of reading is a means out of this slothful condition, but these women always manage to read the late novels. And they have superficial knowledge of a lot of things. I often wonder where they skim even the cream of current knowledge. Shallow and picked up as it is, the little they know is an apparent armor against the charges of ignorance. If they would take up a course of philosophy it would broaden their vision and give meaning to their lives."

"It would take the place of the flirtations with which they while away the time. Flirtations by idle women are very common, even though these women are married. They say they must have an interest.

"But their children should furnish an interest. They don't have them. These waste women I have described are childless. There are more and more childless women coming to our notice every year. Soon the woman with children will be the exception."

Trouble a Real Blessing.

Mrs. Young herself turned interviewer. "What do you think is the greatest lack of the average woman?"

"Self-reliance, as you say."

"And after that?"

"I should say her helplessness in matters that involve the affections. She has no safeguard against suffering caused by misplaced love."

"But women don't suffer any more through the affections than men do. I am quite sure of this. And the average woman as I see her, the one I have described, hasn't any affections to waste. Her interest and affections are centred in 'models.'"

Wellesley College Girls Just Must Pay Cash; That's Horrid!

The girls out at Wellesley College are looking up their ratings in Dun's and Bradstreet's at the week end, to find just how their credit stands.

A horrid merchant out there, who rents furniture for the girls' dormitory, had the impudence to put a sign in his window reading just like this:

FOR RENT—Tables, chairs, desks, vases, banners, and all things necessary for furnishing a room for the college season. MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

Two of the best known girls in the college stood gazing into the windows of a store patronized to a large extent by the students. Then they spied that sign.

"The stingy thing!" said one of them. "To think that he wouldn't charge his old furniture for a couple of days."

The two headed for the college grounds, and spread the news that the Wellesley College girls' credit was no good in the estimation of the Wellesley townsmen.

Records Prove Mrs. Wilson Didn't Know Husband Was Negro

Mrs. Anna Maxwell Wilson, the young and attractive girl who married Upton Wilson and lived with him nearly four years before she discovered he was a negro, did not know at the time of her marriage that he was a negro, the records at the registry here in Boston show conclusively. She lived with him nearly four years before she learned by the visit of his mother, who said in the Southern negro dialect, "Ah have come to see mah son." Mrs. Wilson has just returned to Boston.

The marriage records should show the color and race of both parties, but the records of the Wilson-Maxwell marriage give no record of the color of Wilson.

In Washington, Wilson blames neighbors for the trouble. He declares that they brought charges against him which he could not disprove.

$15,000 FOR GIRL JILTED WHEN SHE REFUSED TO "OBEY"

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—A financial settlement, said to be $15,000, as heart balm for Miss Elizabeth DeNoyelles Blauvelt, will be made by Morris Holmes, who refused to wed her because she jokingly objected to the word "obey" at the rehearsal of her wedding. This will be made in a few days, it is said.

The sole topic of conversation in the offices of the Holmes firm in Bedford Hills, his home town, and among his many friends and those of Miss Blauvelt, was the news in the AMERICAN, on September 12, after ardent wooing, the couple were to marry at the Washington Methodist Episcopal Church. Then came the quarrel over the word "obey."

"Holmes is a stickler when it comes to business," said a friend, "and we are not the least surprised that he changed his mind when it came to marrying."

"Mrs. Maine"

Writes of a Day in the Filene Store

"MRS. MAINE" is not a fictitious character. She is the wife of Mr. H. N. Carr, a business man of Norridgewock, Somerset Co., Me. Stories from her pen have appeared in the magazines.

Mrs. Carr's visit to the Filene store in the role of "Mrs. Maine" resulted from our advertisement in which an imaginary "Mr. Maine" was described as having spent a day with us instead of going to a hotel.

Having planned a visit to Boston, she sent us a telegram on the night of September 16, announcing that she would reach this city the following morning and would test our store service for one day.

We wired asking Mrs. Carr's consent to reproduce her telegram in the newspapers, and that was done on the 18th inst.

Today, through the kindness of Mrs. Carr, we are enabled to give here her impressions of a day in Boston and the Filene Store:

Norridgewock, Maine, September 24, 1912.

William Filene's Sons Co.,

Boston, Massachusetts.

Gentlemen:—You have asked that I send to you my impressions of a day in the new Filene store.

First of all I must confess that the night telegram I sent to you on September 16th was repented of the minute I returned to the house. And if I had not known it was too late I should have hurried down the hill and recalled the message.

But as I prepared for my train I became reconciled to the thought that I had issued a challenge, and the idea of a Maine business man's wife going up to Boston to make a big store prove what it could do for me in a day appealed stronger and stronger every minute.

For a long time after I boarded the boat at Portland I was wide awake, wondering what would come of it all.

Well, I managed to nap a while just about daylight, and I felt rather fit when I left the boat.

Finding that it was a rather foggy morning, I slipped into a cab and was driven to your store. Having read of your bureau of personal service, I inquired for it, and a moment later it seemed to me that I was in a hotel. My bag and wraps were taken care of and checked. I was escorted to a clean, comfortable wash-room where in the course of half an hour I got rid of all traces of travel, and felt keen for breakfast.

An elevator whisked me to the eighth floor, and a more beautiful breakfast room I never saw, although I had been in the best hotels in the East. I was struck particularly with the color scheme, so subdued and restful to the eyes. The floral decorations pleased me, too, as being in such excellent taste and not overdone.

I had dropped the remark in the bureau of personal service that I had a great deal on for the day, and I was gratified, soon after I had ordered my breakfast, to find a representative of that bureau at my elbow, asking if in any way I could be served. In this manner I arranged to have a telephone message sent to my sister, who lives in one of your suburbs, asking her to meet me in the store for luncheon, bringing her little boy.

"Could we arrange to procure theatre tickets for you?" the young lady from the service bureau inquired.

That was just what I wanted, though, womanlike, I probably would not have thought of it until the last minute.

As the result of another suggestion made by the personal service representative, it was arranged that I make a trip around historic Boston on the day following. I also made appointments with the manicuring and hair dressing shops of your store for the afternoon. And I sent a telegram home to Mr. Carr, blanks having been brought to me at the breakfast table.

While awaiting the coming of my sister, I proceeded with my shopping. No need to go into details—it is too long a story! And yet, while I provided for my own winter apparel needs and for those of some friends at home, the whole thing was accomplished in a surprisingly brief space of time, thanks to your efficient and attentive clerks and your system of quick change.

I should like to devote a whole page to a description of the things I saw and what I purchased, but you wish from me an account of my personal experience in the store rather than of my buying.

While down in the engine room looking over the apparatus which purifies the air, for your basement store, I was unfortunate enough to get a speck of dirt in my eye. I was taken to the hospital on the eighth floor, where it was removed by a trained nurse.

While on that floor we inspected the restaurant, library and rest-room of the Filene employees. I was surprised to find that here breakfast, luncheon and dinner are served at a minimum cost, and girls can rest, read or sew, as the firm insists each girl take her full hour for luncheon. It all impressed me as a wonderfully liberal and modern business feature.

At the appointed time I met my sister and nephew. We went to the restaurant for luncheon. The music, which was rendered by a choralcelo, was very pleasing and restful—such a change from the usual orchestra! The service was quick and thorough and the food delicious. I was surprised when the waitress refused the small fee I offered at the termination of luncheon, she explaining that it was one of the rules of the house that no gratuities be accepted.

My sister, having some errands to do, left her youngster in the play-room for children, and we went to the hair-dressing parlors.

After having my shoes polished, I rejoined my sister and we took the boy to the barber shop for children. He had his hair trimmed in the cutest way!

At 4:45 p. m. we again went to the restaurant and had tea, after which I took a refreshing bath and dressed for the theatre—all this right in your store.

When I read your advertisement about "Mr. Maine," whom you admitted was a fictitious character, I could not believe that a store could approach so nearly the services of a hotel. But you have convinced me that everything set down in "Mr. Maine's" experiences could be duplicated in reality at any time.

Indeed, it seems to me that you afforded me even more personal comfort than those ascribed to "Mr. Maine."

Now that I am at home again, in this quiet little town, the whole thing seems like a dream.

Permit me to congratulate you not only upon your store as such but as an institution of public service the like of which I have not seen anywhere, and I have been about a good deal.

You are at liberty to make whatever use of this letter you choose, as I feel that I am conferring a favor upon New England women generally when I acquaint them with what happened to me under your hospitable roof.

Sincerely,

Mrs. H. N. Carr

COMMERCE MEN PRAISE BOSTON

The closing of the official proceedings of the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce yesterday was made the occasion by numerous delegates to express their opinions of the value of the fifth congress and also of the reception they have received here in Boston.

Of the United States delegates, none is more prominently before the public than Albertus H. Baldwin, who is delegate No. 1 on the official list. He represents President Taft and is chairman of the Bureau of Manufactures in Washington. He said yesterday to an AMERICAN reporter:

"This congress is a great achievement, both for Boston and the United States. There have been International congresses with larger numbers than have met here, but never before have so many nations come together in harmonious conference. It cannot but be a great step toward international peace when the representatives from fifty-five nations of the earth rub shoulders together.

Lauds Boston's Welcome.

"Never before have foreigners and strangers received a more cordial and hospitable welcome than Boston has given the delegates to this congress."

Mr. Baldwin was unwilling to state what he thought would be the practical value of the action taken by the congress in regard to international arbitration.

"I must have time to study this before I should be justified in giving an official opinion," he said.

Hon. J. F. Jenkins, member of the executive committee of the British Imperial Council of Commerce and of the Australian Chamber of Commerce in London and also export merchant and director of companies, was ardent in his praise:

"This congress has accomplished some very definite results. In the first place the delegates who are to meet in London, one from each country here represented, will come together to decide upon the question of a universal check system. This will undoubtedly result in laws in the various countries which will solve many of the present commercial difficulties between nations."

Continuing, he said:

Praises Peace Move.

"The resolutions adopted leading toward arbitration of nations with nations, as well as individuals with individuals, is a distinct step in advance of anything yet accomplished toward universal peace. Such action taken by the representatives of the great commercial interests of the world will have more real weight and significance than similar action by political, religious or altruistic gatherings. This is true because of the immense power and economic interests which bind the merchants of the world together.

"And you may say for me," he concluded, "that the unusual and unexcelled hospitality received here in Boston by the delegates from abroad is greatly appreciated. Never have we been more courteously and handsomely entertained."

Miss Amsden Was Once a Little Reading Girl, But Now She Is a Citizen of Paris, Where She Lives In a Small Apartment.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

If you ask a Paris cabman to take you to the Rue Jacques Offenbach he will nod, cluck to his horse and jog along. After fifteen or twenty minutes' drive he will turn his funny red face around and say:

"What street, monsieur?"

Then you realize that he took you for a fare without knowing where you wanted to go.

"Rue Jacques Offenbach."

"Tres bien. Rue Jacobat."

"No! no! Offenbach."

After some argument a policeman will be summoned. He will gravely consult a street directory five years old and remark:

"Alas, monsieur. There isn't any Rue Jacques Offenbach."

A second policeman comes along and an animated discussion ensues. The second officer is passing intelligent.

"Offenbach was a musician," he remarks. "Try the neighborhood of the Rue Monart, monsieur."

I followed his advice, and after many adventures found a grocer on the Rue Monart who knew the Rue Jacques Offenbach. It was a new and tiny street with only two apartment houses on it, hardly more than an alley. No wonder the cabmen did not know it.

Citizeness of Paris Now.

At No. 1 Rue Jacques Offenbach lives Miss Elizabeth Amsden, formerly of Reading and East Boston, but now a citizeness of Paris.

How a little Boston girl ever located a street unknown by the cabmen was a mystery I had to have elucidated just as soon as we had said "How do."

"Oh," said Miss Amsden, "it was very simple. I wanted an apartment so I took a carriage and just drove. We happened to pass through this street and I liked the looks of the building so I rented an apartment. I found out the name of the street afterwards.

It was a nice apartment house. It possessed an escalator or elevator by which the concierge polished with pride. It had stone stairs and contained a multitude of tiny little flats. Miss Amsden lived on the sixth floor, and from her window had a fine view of a lot of other buildings and windows.

In the post I have written things about Elizabeth Amsden. I said she was an excellent singer. In fact she was the big prize among dramatic sopranos introduced by Director Russell. Also she was good to look at.

The last time I had seen Elizabeth was the night at the Boston Opera when the asbestos curtain cut a performance of "Il Trovatore" in two. Miss Amsden, as Leonora, when the last act was finally reached, would have been also cut in two as she lay dead on the stage, by a descending curtain, only she came to life, emitted a wild yell and fled from the scene.

To Star in Montreal.

"Such things are never going to happen to me again," declared the young singer. "Last season I sang my big parts in most cases without an orchestral rehearsal. I was on trial and I had to take my opportunities when they came. I shall never have to do such things any more, I hope."

It will be good news to her friends in Boston that Miss Amsden is going to be the star of the Montreal season, and will come to Boston again with all the prestige and swagger of an honest-to-gracious prima donna.

WORCESTER MAN IN U. S. COURT HERE

William T. Reddington of Worcester, owner of a chain of clothing stores, who was arrested by the Worcester police on a capias issued by the United States Court at Boston, was arraigned in the United States District Court in Boston today.

"I'VE ARRIVED," SAYS WILSON

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Governor Wilson slept late today after his tour of New England. Discussing his New England invasion the Governor said:

"I feel immensely gratified and encouraged by my receptions in New England. I was especially impressed by the fact that everywhere the great crowds with whom I came in contact and the people whom I met personally seemed to take it for granted that the Democratic ticket will be elected. That struck me as being remarkably significant.

"The size and enthusiasm of the crowds that wanted to hear me speak and see me also impressed me. And it was gratifying to find it so interesting. There can be no doubt that they are thinking seriously, they are no anxious to find out what I had to say."

"Of course you feel that the Democratic ticket will win," it was suggested. "I have not allowed myself to form any conclusion on the subject," was the prompt reply. "It will be the same to me whether I win or lose—I shall keep on fighting for a principle.

"However," added the Governor, "I feel that I have arrived in American politics. When I was a candidate for Governor of New Jersey I thought I had arrived, when a stranger in a campaign crowd slapped me on the back and exclaimed, 'How are you, Doc?' I felt surer of it the day when a switchman in Kansas called out to me when I stood on the rear platform of a private car, 'You're all right, Woody.' Now I feel sure of it, for somebody in the audience at Bridgeport cried out in the middle of my speech, 'Say, you're all right, kid.'"

The Governor and his party entertained three ladies in his private car "Federal" from Bridgeport to Stamford last night. They were Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the National committeeman of Connecticut and two of her friends. The ladies were escorted through the car on a sightseeing expedition by the Governor himself, who remarked that "all the car needs is the tender feminine touch to make it perfect."

The Governor will rest in Seagirt tomorrow. He goes to Atlantic City on Monday to attend a convention, and on Tuesday he will attend the New Jersey Democratic convention at Trenton. He will leave in the morning and board his private car for Denver, Col., on his second Western tour.

FOUR ESCAPE AS SCHOONER FOUNDERS OFF DEER ISLAND

The Newburyport schooner F. A. Smith, loaded with coal, struck a submerged rock on the edge of the main ship channel at midnight, and sank in forty feet of water a few hours later just west of Deer Island. Captain Barney Hackey and his crew, James Dick and Joseph Sanier, escaped in the dinghy to Deer Island and came up to the city today on the return trip of the Deer Island boat.

The F. A. Smith, built in 1869, was running from Newburyport to Boston. Captain Hackey, who owned the vessel, tried to beat through the main ship channel in Broad Sound, but was blown off his course and hit the submerged boulder.

He and his two men worked the pumps desperately after getting off the rock, but the water came through a hole in her bows faster than the pumps could take care of it. When the schooner sank the men were prepared for a quiet getaway. The schooner's topmast just shows at high tide. The cargo is valuable and an effort will be made to save it.

300 Lynn Girls Out for $10,000 Hospital Fund

Three hundred Lynn girls started out to demonstrate that they could collect $10,000 for Lynn Hospital by selling badges, buttons, pins, automobile flags, watch fobs and such trifles to the population-at-large. Last year's Hospital Day netted $6,000 in Lynn.

The girls swarmed all over town early in the day, holding up pedestrians everywhere, even in the stores.

All their wares were 10 cents each, but few purchasers had the hardihood to ask for change. Many a bill—five and ten-dollar ones—was given for a 10-cent purchase, the balance being a donation for the hospital cause.

Mayor William P. Connery was a star victim. He lives on Wheeler street, fifteen minutes walk from City Hall. The first girl he met sold him a badge, the second one sold him a button, the third an auto flag and so on. By the time His Honor arrived at City Hall he looked like the Grand High Potentate of the Royal Order of Badge-Lifters, he was so "doiled up" with proofs of his loyalty to the hospital.

The sale was in charge of Captain Auxiselle J. Holtt, assisted by William S. Burrill, James W. Hitchings, Luther R. Johnson, Fred F. Viall, Fred F. Belcher and a committee of women.

ULSTER MEN SIGN PROTEST

BELFAST, Sept. 28.—With hundreds of soldiers held in instant readiness for an outbreak, the people of Ulster province today registered a mighty protest against home rule for Ireland by signing a solemn covenant, in which they declare they will not submit to political separation from the British throne.

By some it was regarded as the first step toward civil war, which has been threatened by the Unionists of North Ireland if the Liberal government at London carries out its program granting autonomy to Ireland.

At least 500,000 persons took part in the great anti-home rule demonstration which marked the celebration of Ulster Day.

Orangemen came from all parts of Northern Ireland to take part. Not alone men, but women and children participated in the ceremonies and showed the inflammatory speeches of the anti-home rule leaders. The city was decked with Union Jacks, and miniature flags were worn.

The feature of the celebration was the signing of the covenant. Among the first to place his signature upon the document was Sir Edward Carson, the Unionist leader, who has taken a leading part in the Ulster fight against home rule. Escorted by 100 stalwart Orangemen, selected from various Unionist clubs, Sir Edward went to City Hall just before noon and placed his signature upon the covenant. They waved the flag carried to the front at the battle of the Boyne by King William in 1690.

Sir Edward used a gold pen and a silver pen which had been presented to him for the purpose last night by Captain James Craig, M. P. for County Down. He was followed by other prominent Orangemen, who affixed their names, and then came the populace, who registered their protest against home rule. Outside the City Hall a vast throng of men and women cheered and waved flags and cried threats against the Irish Nationalists.

GOV. MARSHALL IN BOSTON MONDAY FOR 2 DAYS' SPEECHES

Governor Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, Democratic candidate for Vice-President, will come to Boston Monday and pass two days campaigning in Massachusetts. The National Committee decided today to send him here to follow up the speeches of Governor Wilson. Governor Marshall will arrive from New York soon after noon on Monday. He will attend a luncheon confab in Masonic Temple in the afternoon, with Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald and Chairman Wilson of the Democratic State Committee. He will go to Lowell. The vice-presidential candidate is to speak there in Associate Hall, Middle street, in the evening, for an address in City Hall. Returning to Boston for the night, Governor Marshall will go to Salem on Tuesday, speaking in the forenoon and on the same evening in Odd Fellows' Hall at Lynn. He will go back to New York on Wednesday morning.

DAVIS HELD IN $40,000; WAITS IN JAIL FOR TRIAL

J. Irving Davis, Providence A. O. U. W. official charged with $52,000 shortage in accounts.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 28.—J. Irving Davis, the A. O. U. W. official charged with being short $52,000 in his accounts, was arraigned today in the sixth District Court, upon four counts and was held in $10,000 bonds upon each count, a total of $40,000. He was unable to get bail and was remanded to jail for trial. Davis gave out a statement declaring that he alone took the money and spent it.

WITH BRIDE ON LONG JOURNEY

Having traveled 6,000 miles to procure and bring back a bride, Dr. Hugo R. C. Riemer of Boston sailed today on the Canopic with his young wife for another journey of 7,000 or 8,000 miles.

Mrs. Riemer is only twenty years old and comes from Hillesburg, Washington. She was a student at the Emerson College of Oratory in Boston when she first met the young marine hospital physician.

The wedding took place in Kilensburg two weeks ago. Dr. and Mrs. Riemer will go first to Zurich, where they will settle themselves for some months during which Dr. Riemer will study chalmoscope work with Dr. Haab at the University of Zurich.

Later Dr. Riemer will visit Vienna and Berlin to inspect their remarkable hospitals.

Captain Ernest Scally, who commanded the steamship Republic of the White Star line and went down with his ship, to be picked up out of the water by the cutter Gresham, was also a passenger. Captain Scally is now a lawyer, having passed the bar after three years of study at Ann Arbor, Mich. When he returns from a brief visit to his old home in England he will settle in San Francisco to practice admiralty law.

Watch for the Big 25-Vote Coupon Nomination

IN THE AMERICAN'S $40,000 CONTEST

GIVEN ADVICE ON HOW TO WIN $10,000 PRIZE

By WILL HUSSEL.

I have made a little discovery that I want to tell all the other contestants about. Some of them may have found it out already.

Most of the big work that is done in this contest for you will be done by yourself.

And by long odds it will be the most effective work.

There really isn't much excitement after all, in plugging like an Indian to swell another chap's bank account by ten thousand dollars.

If a friend of yours is lucky enough to land twenty subscriptions for you, worth 70,000 votes, he is mighty apt to ask himself why he didn't start out to win this big prize for himself.

And after that, if he is a human, every-day kind of chap, he is more than likely to lose a little of that fine zest he had when he started.

You will remember that I told you how, when Representative Jim Spowter put it up to me that this was my opportunity to collect on all the fine things he said I had done for others—like serving on working committees and so on—he sent out a call for a meeting of one hundred of our best friends and forty-two of them showed up.

Just Like Politics.

Then we appointed ten district captains, each with nine men—using the names of the original one hundred who had been invited to come in—and at the three conferences we have held we have been lucky to get out as many as four of the captains!

I'm not blaming the fellows—they are the best friends any chap could have—but I am TRUTHFULLY telling how these things are bound to turn out. I had found it so on the big committees I had worked on for the good of the town. First meeting, big, enthusiastic; second meeting, not quite so big, not nearly so enthusiastic; meetings along half-way in the campaign, two or three others and myself present. BUT THE REAL WORK BEING DONE.

And so it is here, and so it will be in this contest of ours for the Sunday AMERICAN'S ten thousand dollars, for the five district prizes of one thousand dollars each, and for the 1,405 other prizes.

I haven't made such a beginning as warrants my calming the first prize today, but nearly three-quarters of the subscriptions on hand, to be entered under my name, I HAVE TAKEN PERSONALLY.

And so I find—as you will find—that I have got to depend in the main upon my own efforts. Realizing this thus early, it has served to put me on my mettle. I am devoting all my spare time to the canvass. The results up to date are satisfactory.

They tell me that the AMERICAN will be glad to help contestants by publishing our photographs, together with a little sketch. I think this will help, as all advertising is bound to help. I propose to send my photograph in early and see to it that the little "ad" is brought to the attention of every friend and acquaintance.

This will be about all from me until you begin to see my name in the standing.

And is that name "Will Hussell"?

Not exactly, as of course you have known from the beginning.

And now we make way for the Contest Manager, who has things to say this afternoon to every contestant.

First of all—the Contest Manager says—I want to say that I shall be pleased to make one of photographs and brief sketches. Of course I cannot see all of them, but I shall use my best offices to get into the paper as many as I can. In this matter it will have to be first come first served.

Value of Advertising.

I do not need to emphasize the value of this sort of free advertising. Hundreds of your friends, all over New England, might be saving coupons for you, or sending them in in your name. IF THEY KNOW YOU WERE IN THE CONTEST. What better way to let them know than by a photographer and a brief sketch. Of course you will mail them to me at P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass.

Another thing!

Contestants who observe the rule that coupons must be sent in packages of 100 are writing in to ask what they shall do with respect to this rule when they have a loose package of 72 votes, for instance, and to get the benefit of them must send them in while they are good.

Some seem to think that they must left these 72 coupons.

Nothing of the sort!

The thing to do, in a case like this, is to send in the odd 72 coupons—or 35 coupons or 28 coupons, as the case may be—but to mark the package plainly on the outside with the EXACT number of coupons.

Keep Coupons Separate.

And always keep the 5-vote coupons and the 25-vote coupons separate. This rule MUST be respected. Don't feel that you have got to have 100 coupons, but DON'T MIX THEM.

You might have five packages of 100 coupons each and 56 coupons over. If the time limit is about to elapse, send them all in, but mark the 56-coupon package distinctly.

With reference to the Special Offer—an award of 5,000 votes to everybody who sends in ten subscriptions—for any term—before 10 p. m. on Saturday, October 5, I want to point out that contestants who are holding back these subscriptions until the last minute are making a grave mistake.

Send in every subscription as soon as you get it. We will keep the count for you, and keep it exact. When the subscription is received here, always with the guarantee, of course, the subscriber begins to get his paper immediately.

You can see what that means. He must have been interested in your struggle for the ten thousand dollars or he would not have subscribed through you.

Consequently he means to keep the vote coupons for you. Hence it behooves you to have his paper started at once, for every daily paper means 5 votes to you and every SUNDAY paper 25 votes.

There are one or two more things I would say to you today, but I imagine I have reached the limit on space. Be sure to read my suggestions in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

BIG SHAKE-UP IN DETECTIVE FORCE SURPRISES POLICE

A shakeup made by Chief Inspector McGarr among the police inspectors caused a big surprise at headquarters today. Inspector Michael H. Cronin of headquarters will do duty at the South station in place of Inspector Gilbert H. Angell, who will report for duty at headquarters.

Inspector Levi Burr, who has been hunting pickpockets, is assigned to the bank squad to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Inspector Dennis Cronin. Inspector Angell is to perform regular assignment and street work from headquarters. Special Officer Cronenwett is assigned to hunt pickpockets. Inspector Douglass will remain in charge of headquarters at night.

Inspector John Mitchell will have for a partner Special Officer James Egan, recently assigned to headquarters from the Jamaica Plain station. They will do special work in Roxbury and Hyde Park.

EATING PLACES AT A PREMIUM AT HARVARD

It is hard to secure eating places at Harvard for the first time in the college's history. The Harvard Crimson says editorially: "It must be extremely gratifying to the university authorities to know that the dining halls have once more gained a substantial prestige in the eyes of students in the university. That the improved conditions are fully appreciated is evidenced by the fact that only two days after the opening of college the capacity of the halls cannot meet the demand for accommodations."

THINK MAN PENNY MATCHING SWINDLER

A dozen men who have been swindled by matching pennies in the Public Gardens put in their appearance at headquarters today or else received photographs by mail as the result of the arrest of a man giving his name as Joseph A. Albertini.

PIPE DREAMS

DISCONTINUED STORY.

The golden glow of a descending Autumn sun shone on the Polo Grounds.

It was the ninth inning, the score a tie and Rube Marquard on the slab.

The Red Sox in succession had walked and the bases were densely populated.

A mighty cheer arose from Bostonese throats and re-echoed hither and fro as Tris Speaker stroke to the plate.

Marquard paused in deep thought.

Here, gentle reader, we must cease. It was Marquard who got himself into the hole and it is up to him to get himself out.

* * *

JAKE STAHL says he is not superstitious, but it is rumored that he looks upon a home run with the bases full as a favorable omen.

* * *

WATCHING a ball game after the pennant is clinched is like listening to a band organ after a grand opera.

* * *

KEOKUK, Iowa, breaks into print with the first broken arm of the football season thereby gaining a spot on the football map.

* * *

WILLIAM TAFT threatens to root for the Red Sox, but even that fails to shake the confidence of Jake Stahl and his gallant crew.

* * *

HUGH MEHEGAN, who hails from Australia, insists on doing battle with Packey McFarland, and if he does he will have nobody to blame but himself.

* * *

IT'S A GRAND OLD STORY.

They pan him and they flay him and they hammer him today,
For Buck has handed him the mitt and turned the other day.
Tomorrow they will place a wreath of roses on his dome;
A manager's a wonder when he brings the bacon home.

* * *

AD WOLGAST announces that he is ready to engage in an argument with Joe Mandot. His arm healed with startling rapidity since McFarland removed his person from the scene.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT is a great little manager, but Roger Bresnahan and Hugh Duffy can head him some valuable information on the futility of trying to get team work out of a suffragette movement.

* * *

JUST to show his versatility, John Evers passed up the umpire and started a fight with Joe Tinker. Reports from the ringside confirm the impression that he is not built for a white hope.

* * *

SPEAKING of college colors, Black and Blue would be highly appropriate at a football game.

* * *

ANOTHER way to get a line on the world's series is to read all the expert dope pertaining thereunto and then forget it.

* * *

WE note that Biarritz is enthused over the approaching match between Hon. Marshall and Hon. Ainsmith. If all goes to show how easy it is to become enthused if one is inclined that way.

* * *

JOSHUA had commanded the sun to stand still. "It will save us a double-header tomorrow," he said.

* * *

WE fail to observe any hectic surprise over the news that Jim Barry struck the floor at various intervals in his conflict with Luther McCarthy. It has become one of his pet habits.

* * *

HIGHER MATHEMATICS.

The shades of night were falling fast
When through a college town there passed
A youth who wandered all alone
And spoke in muffled monotone:
"6-18-5-26-3-4."

* * *

"Oh, stay awhile," a stranger said,
"And rest your worn and weary head."
He only gazed with vacant eye
And muttered as he wandered by:
"7-11-5-14-2-6."

* * *

He strode away in falling night,
And as he disappeared from sight
We heard his distant voice: "I'll bet
I learn them gol darn signals yet—
4-13-1-22-8-5."

OPEN SEASON ON FOR PREDICTIONS

By DAMON RUNYON.

This is the open season for managerial predictions. You talk to the managers of the American League and they will assure you that the Boston Red Sox will surely grab the bunting which goes to the winners of the world's series. You talk to the managers in the National League and they will assure you that the Giants will walk away with the highest honors in the baseball world.

* * *

Connie Mack came to town. Now, here is a fellow who is accounted one of the greatest managers in the game. He played the Giants last year and beat them. He should be aware of their faults and should be able to tell where they are strong. Because they must have strong points. Otherwise they would not be on top in the National League.

"Who will win?" connie Mack was asked.

"The Red Sox," he answered.

"Why?" was the next query.

"Well, I've played both teams. It's my opinion that the Red Sox will win. But I refuse to go into details.

* * *

Joe Tinker was in New York. Since Manager Chance was in the hospital and could not be interviewed, the acting manager was.

"Who will win the world's championship?" was asked of Joe.

"The Giants," was his answer.

"Why?" was the next query.

"Well, I think the series will be a slugging match. I do not believe that either team has the pitchers to hold the sluggers on the other side. I think the Giants will have it on the Red Sox if it is a free-hitting series because of their speed on the bases. I do not believe that the Red Sox have a catcher who can hold the Giants. In fact, it's my opinion that Jimmy Archer is the only catcher in the game who can."

* * *

Along comes Clark Griffith, manager of the Senators. "Who will triumph in the world's series?" he is asked.

"The Red Sox sure," is his answer. You are somewhat impressed by what the boss of the Senators has to say for the reason that he managed the Cincinnati Reds last year, therefore playing against the Giants, while his team was in the fight against the Red Sox until a short time ago.

* * *

"Why?" he is asked.

"Looks to me like the Boston fellows have the strongest pitching staff. Also that they have the best team on the offense. I do not believe that the Giants will be able to get to Wood, Hall, Collins, Bedient nor O'Brien. I do not see anything on the New York staff that will hold Speaker and his fellow cloisters. It looks to me like the Red Sox."

Along comes Roger Bresnahan of the Cardinals. "Who will win?" he is asked.

"That's easy to answer. The Giants."

* * *

Here is the proposition in a nutshell: If you talk to an American League manager he will tell you that the Red Sox will win.

If you happen to interview a manager in the National League he will rise reason after reason why the Giants should grab the world's championship. Can you imagine a National League manager shouting from the housetops that an American League team will win? Can you conceive of an American League manager picking the pennant winner in the rival league to beat the best in his own?

If you can you have a vivid imagination. It isn't natural. You know, the managers in the American have no idea that they play faster ball than do the National League fellows—and the same goes for the managers of the senior major league.

Fans Hurry Stahl Auto Fund Only Few Days to Contribute

The Jake Stahl automobile fund is growing, growing larger each day, but it should grow faster. The World's Series will soon be in action, and that seems to be the most appropriate time for the fans' gift of appreciation to be presented to the clever leader of the coming world's champions—The Boston Red Sox. So get busy now, fans. Don't wait until later. This is the time to subscribe to the fund, so that everything can be in readiness for the presentation when the Red Sox open with the Giants at Fenway Park one week from next Wednesday.

You see the time is near at hand and if you expect to be one of those who helped in giving "Big Jake" Stahl what he justly deserves, then send your donation to the Sporting Editor of the AMERICAN at once.

BOSTON WILL HONOR STAHL.

Of course, it has long since been assured that Jake Stahl will be honored by Boston on his return for the way he and his baseball players have honored the city. And it has long since been assured that the shape that honor would take would be an automobile. The only question now remaining is how good an automobile will the people of Boston buy Jake Stahl.

"Big Jake's" triumph for Boston was a great victory—the most widely heralded victory that anybody, or any collection of anybodies, has won for the great old Hub in years and years. So naturally Boston wants to make Jake Stahl's automobile a great automobile, slightly in proportion to the dimensions of Jake Stahl's victory.

Boston Made Famous.

From Maine to California—from Canada to Mexico—and beyond all that, the name of Boston has been made famous by the fighting Red Sox who won this year's pennant.

When a leader of men does that it is customary to honor him in some way—not in words, which are cheap, but by something that shows beyond a doubt what the people think of him and how they appreciate what he has done.

It has been customary, too, for the greatest baseball player in each league to be honored that way.

This gift of Boston would have no significance if ALL Boston did not contribute to it. Nobody can "leave it to the other fellow." Everybody must contribute his share. The share need not be large—just enough to make it representative.

Business men—particularly those who will make a large business profit by the World's Series battle, and who will gain financially by the advertisement of Boston—the Chamber of Commerce, for instance, which is the body that Boston looks to to take a personal and immediate interest in its affairs—should see that Jake Stahl is honored in a manner fitting the city of Boston.

There are scores of ways in which such a fund could be raised. But, from the start, the idea has been to show that Boston voluntarily, without solicitation, raised the money.

How to Complete the Fund.

This is what is needed to complete the fund:

Everybody who reads this article should ask himself (first) if he believes that Boston should honor Jake Stahl and his team of peanut winners (second) how much HE HIMSELF can afford to give, and then should send a check or postal order to the sporting editor of the AMERICAN.

Every contribution made to the fund will be acknowledged through the columns of the AMERICAN.

Here are a few of the letters received yesterday:

Sporting Editor, Boston American, 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir—Enclosed you will find my check for $10 to be applied to the Jake Stahl Automobile fund, and I trust that the subscriptions will come in rapidly in order that Manager Stahl may drive to the first game in Boston of the World's Series in his new car.

Very truly yours,
ARTHUR C. WISE,
Winchester, Mass.

Sporting Editor—Enclosed find one dollar for Jake Stahl's auto. Wishing many Winchester fans would follow suit.

If You Can't Go to New York Go to Boston Arena

The BOSTON AMERICAN'S baseball experts, sitting in the press box of the Polo Grounds, are going to reproduce by special leased wires into the Boston Arena every play and happening of the Red Sox games with the Giants in New York.

A gigantic board with megaphone reproductions is to be installed at the Arena, and the same big production which made such a hit in New York and Philadelphia last year will be duplicated here.

Eight thousand "fans" will be able to sit in comfortable seats and enjoy the games, practically the same as they would were they in New York.

The megaphone descriptions of the crowds and warming up practice will begin one hour before the games are called.

It's to be the biggest affair of its kind ever pulled off. Reserved seats free to Boston Sunday AMERICAN readers. See next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Danny Murphy Unable To Play; Will Scout

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—Danny Murphy, captain of the Athletics, probably will never be able to play baseball again, but he will retain his connection with the Athletics in the capacity of a scout.

It is stated the accident Murphy met with in Chicago, which caused water on the knee, has left him with a stiff leg. Connie Mack acknowledged today it did not seem likely that Murphy will be able to play ball again.

Bay State Golfers Lose in Big Match

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—Pennsylvania defeated Massachusetts in the eighth annual interstate golf matches for the Lesley cup on the links of the Huntingdon Valley Country Club at Noble. The winners will meet the New York team in the final matches today.

The local players won all five of the two-ball foursomes and succeeded in winning four of the single matches, the final score being 9 to 6. All matches were closely contested. Hanson of Pennsylvania defeating Davidson of Massachusetts in the final single match only after twenty-one holes had been played.

AMATEUR BOUTS BILLED.

Boxing fans who favor the amateur contests will have a great opportunity to see the sport at a big tourney now being arranged for October 11 at the Pilgrim A. A. Contests will be staged in three classes, 115, 125, 145 pounds, and two special bouts. The specials will likely bring together heavyweights in one and middleweights in the other.

MEN!

A Men's Shirt Story

We have never outgrown our "Why" habit. As youngsters we wanted to know, and as grown-ups we insist on knowing the "whyfore" of things.

That's the reason we are telling you why we can sell to fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers of New England, men's furnishings that will satisfy.

Our idea for the new store was completeness. So our buyers were instructed to get the best values in merchandise procurable.

They purchased silk shirts with satin cords, zephyrs, madras, batistes, oxfords, percales, flannels, silk and wool, silk and linen, almost every conceivable combination.

The pick of materials, styles and colors from European and American markets. Ready in sizes from 13 1-2 to 20; in sleeve lengths from 30 to 37 inches.

Priced as high as $10; as low as $1.

Now, about our shirt at $1.

We call it our dollar shirt, although we doubt if its value can be duplicated at that price. Printed madras with self stripes, satin striped percales, woven madras and harmony percales. Pleated and negligee styles. Some have extra cuffs to be sewn on when the first pair become worn.

Sizes 13 1-2 to 17. Sleeves 32 to 35. $1.

A Men's Tie Story

This story might almost begin, "Once upon a time," for the glowing colors remind one of the stories of Oriental richness and splendor.

France, Germany, England and Austria generously contributed patterns and designs, and American makers worked hand in hand with our designer.

Every agreeable weave of silk, every popular shape. Knitted scarfs in more shapes and colors than you have ever seen before in one shop, we think.

English squares, knitted ascots, the popular stripes. Bow ties, made-ties, every demand has been met.

And every tie of pure silk, hand-made. Priced as high as $4; as low as 35 cents.

Now, about our tie at 55 cents.

Made of the best silks obtainable; full fashioned in liberal shapes. Each seam slip-stitched and taped to prevent stretching. Slip-easy neck bands, richest weaves and colors in foreign and domestic silks.

You would think we were describing a more expensive tie, wouldn't you?

Shirts and neckwear for dress wear—in complete assortments.

Ties displayed in glass cases, in self-display trays that make the whole assortment visible at a glance.

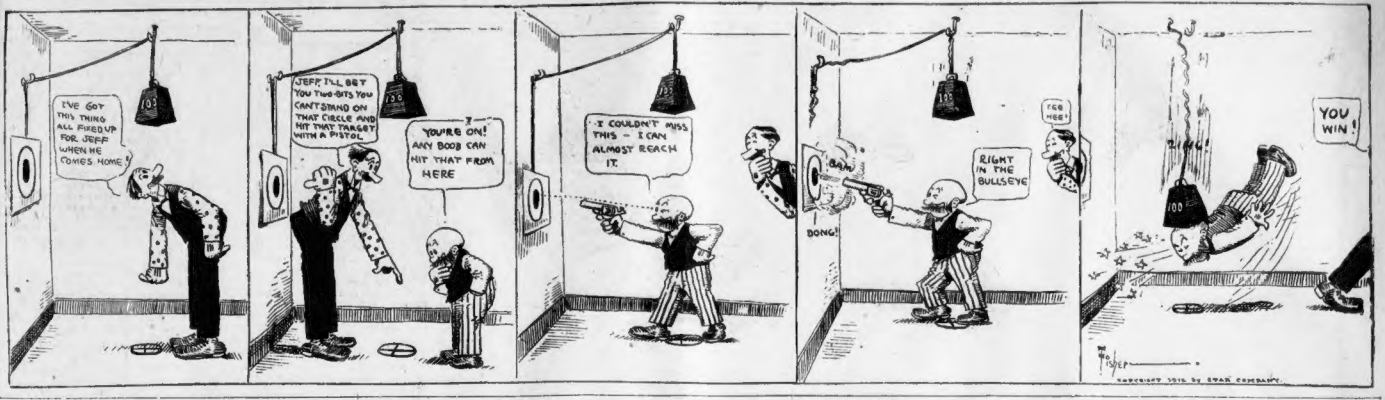
CHANCE TO QUIT AS MANAGER OF THE CHICAGO CUBS

And the Weight Was Solid Iron This Time — By "Bud" Fisher



MISS BROWNE AND PARTNER LOSE

Miss Mary Browne of Pasadena, Cal., tasted defeat twice in twenty-four hours when, with her partner, Mrs. Robert Williams of Providence, she lost the women's doubles title at Longwood this morning after losing the mixed double semi-final yesterday afternoon.

Miss Edna Wildey of Plainfield, N. J., and her young partner, Miss Adelaide Browning, were responsible for the defeat of the more notable players, and their victory came as the result of a hard three set contest which was filled with spectacular playing.

It was the ability of the winning team to get their returns well back in their opponents' courts together with a steady team play, that ultimately brought them the women's doubles cup.

One or two matches were played in the women's handicap singles, but this tourney will not be finished until the early part of next week. At present Miss C. Ewers of Jamaica Plain looks good for this title as her play this week shows her to be a player who will bear watching in the future. She is the women's college champion, but this is her first turnament at Longwood and her showing has been remarkably good.

The match that attracted the largest gallery was the mixed doubles final in which Miss Marion Fenno and J. P. Gardner, Jr., opposed Miss Dorothy Green of Philadelphia, and R. D. Little, one of the present team of Massachusetts doubles champions.

Summary:

FINAL WOMEN'S DOUBLES

Miss Adelaide Browning and Miss Edna Wildey, Plainfield, N. J., defeated Miss Mary Browne, Pasadena, Cal., and Mrs. Robert Williams, Providence, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3.

THIRD ROUND, WOMEN'S HANDICAP TOURNEY.

Miss Alice Bowker, Boston, defeated Miss Doty, Boston, 6—0, 6—4, 6—3.

Wakefield Answers Braman Dow Defi

In answer to the Braman Dow A. A. challenge printed in the AMERICAN a few days ago, Manager George R. Dingwell of the Wakefield Basa Ball Club has sent the following reply.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir—A few nights ago I noticed a challenge in your paper from Braman Dow A. C. to play with any team. Mr. Hallet has requested a challenge by mail from the same parties, but evidently the writer was afraid to sign his name to the challenge and I have yet to find out who caused the challenge to be sent. Mr. Hallet of Braman Dow A. A. made arrangements for the game to be played September 21 the only conditions that we imposed upon him was that Fred McKie must play for his team otherwise I would not consider the team half strong enough to play against us. I am glad right there that we are not afraid of McKie, in fact we would like to have him play with us, so I suggest that Manager Hallett, Fred McKie and Bill McKie all live in Greenwood (a part of Wakefield) Mr. Anderson, Hoff college lives in Wakefield, and is a brother to one of our players. These players are familiar with the teams we have played this season and know that we win our games fair and square and not through the influence of any umpire. I can refer you to the Reebuilt A. A., Acme A. A., Somerville B. B. C., Somerville A. A., Prospect Unions or Columbias or any of the teams we have played this season. That part of the argument comes from us, now then we will state a few things that we require ourself. I will say that we cannot play them at once as today we start a series with the Calumet Club of Stoneham, and we will play their game and when that is completed we will take up the matter with Braman Dow A. A. again, but upon the conditions as named in the challenge. In the first place our captain was not in the game Saturday and for that reason they inserted in the challenge that the teams will be composed of the same men that started in the first game. If upon investigation you find that Braman Dow A. A. have any objection to the league with the above condition that I will gladly agree upon, when I will settle all the arrangements when we come together to make arrangements.

Yours truly,

GEORGE R. DINGWELL,
Manager Wakefield B. B. C.

Exeter Opens Season vs. Cushing Academy

EXETER, N. H., Sept. 28.—Exeter Academy lined up this afternoon against the Cushing Academy eleven for the opening game of the season. While the Cushing Academy team is fairly strong, it is not expected to cause the powerful Exeter eleven much trouble.

Exeter started without Kirkpatrick, its captain, who is out of the game for the present with an injured back. Buck, a new man, who thus far has shown up well, was given his place. Hurd, last year's fullback, was tried at right guard, instead of his old position. This change is the result of the abundance of backfield material.

The Exeter boys were in good shape for the contest and were eager to get into the fray. The next game on the Exeter schedule does not come for two weeks, when the Dartmouth Freshmen come to Exeter.

Exeter lined up as follows: Gould, l. e.; McGrath, l. t.; Neal, l. g.; Bolton, c.; Hurd, r. g.; Black, r. t.; Dunn, r. e.; Casey, q.b.; Winters l. h. b.; Bingham, r. h. b.; Quigley, f.b.

Lewiston Fans Plan Big Time for "Bill"

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 28.—If present plans materialize, Bill Carrigan, catcher of the Red Sox team, and whose home is in this city, will be given a reception upon his arrival home after the world's series. No date has been set, but it is planned to have the affair take place in the Lewiston City Hall.

A mass meeting is to be held next Monday, when committees will be appointed and all plans completed.

GLOVER BEATS AHEARN.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 28.—Johnny Glover of South Boston defeated young Ahearn of Brooklyn, the English dancing master in a gruelling mill. The pace was a furious one and Ahearn was very tired at the finish, although Ahearn had weight, height and reach on Glover. The latter was far too clever for him.

Amateur Games

Cunningham Gym, amateur football champions of the state last season, will begin work today. Manager John Larrabee has a likely looking bunch of candidates and should have little trouble in getting together another speedy eleven. Powell, who played fullback last season, has given up the game.

The Cunningham squad will work under the direction of Sid Hazelton, the Milton High coach, and Harry Briley. Teams wishing to arrange games should communicate with John A. Larrabee, No. 110 State street.

* * *

The Forty-sixth Company, C. A. C., of Fort Strong will be represented by an exceptionally strong team this season. The average weight will be about 145 pounds. Teams wishing to secure games after October 1 should write to Manager Football Team, Forty-sixth Company, C. A. C., Fort Strong.

* * *

The Millstream A. A. squad is working under the direction of Billie Randall and with excellent results. The team is rather light, averaging 130 pounds. Teams desiring to schedule games with the Chelsea boys should write to Manager Carl Hartbower, or telephone Chelsea 872-J.

* * *

The Romar Juniors want games with 125-130-pound teams. Have an open date next Saturday. Manager James Brady, No. 103 Clifton street, Dorchester.

BASEBALL MEN OUT AT EXETER

Two score of candidates have reported to Coach Carney at Exeter for Fall baseball practice. Among this number are several members of last year's crack nine, which went through the season with but one defeat, and that to Harvard.

The prospects have never appeared brighter for a winning team. Besides the old men there is a lot of likely looking new material, which under the tutelage of the old big leaguer, will undoubtedly develop into valuable players.

Fall baseball practice is a new institution at Exeter. It was introduced by Coach Carney, in order to commence the weeding-out practice, so that the team would get an early start in the Spring.

Of the new men Carter and Johnson give promise of developing into first-class slab artists. Johnson is tall and rangy, has lots of speed and a good assortment of curves. Brackett is a southpaw and has plenty of "stuff."

Manager M'Graw Now Resting His Regulars

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Manager McGraw of the New York Giants began grooming his men for the World's Series with the Boston Americans. The team's failure to clinch the pennant until Thursday necessitated keeping all the world's series eligibles regularly in the game, but with the race won the recruits now will be given the brunt of the work for the remaining week of play. The veteran players will rest in relays, playing just enough to keep in good condition.

It is seldom that McGraw discusses the work of his young players, but he said today that the debut of Al Demaree, the Southern League star used in the box against Boston, was the finest work he had seen done by a newcomer in twenty years of baseball.

Speculation as to how Demaree would figure in the World's Series, however, is useless, as he reported to the Giants September 4, a week too late to be eligible.

Boston College Team Will Play Fordham

For the first time in ten years an eleven from Boston College will meet the Fordham team on the gridiron this year. The game, which is the first on this year's Boston College schedule, will be played in New York next Saturday. In preparation for the contest Coach Joy of Boston College is daily whipping his team into form.

The Boston College team this year is rather light, but has developed much speed under the coaching of Joy and Capt. John Harrigan. The backfield is already in fine working order, and though there are a few weak points in the line, Coach Joy is confident that he will be able to put a formidable team in the field against Fordham a week from today.

M'GOORTY SIGNED UP TO BATTLE GIBBONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Announcement was made at the Garden A. C. today that Eddie McGoorty of Oshkosh, Wis., claimant of the middleweight championship, has been signed up to meet Mike Gibbons of St. Paul, Minn., the welterweight champion, for a ten-round bout Thursday night, November 7.

Plunging Will Win This Year, Says Yost

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 28.—"A good quarterback who knows how to mix his plays and can open up the game when he needs to will do a lot for the team under the new rules," said Coach Fielding H. Yost, who arrived here this afternoon. "A straight plunging game will not do, and a heavy team will not have the advantage that so many seem to think.

"Of course the unrestricted forward pass will help a lot, but a proper mixture of the old style plunging tactics and the newer open game will produce the result.

"Four downs will help a lot, but you still have two and a half yards to gain on a down, and under the old rules there were many times that a team couldn't make the yard and two-thirds it needed to make its distance."

Henry Curtis, famous lineman back in '03 and '04, has been obtained as assistant coach in place of Curt Redden, who could not return this year. Only seven men showed up today for early practice and some of last year's stars have not yet sent word that they will be here, although all but McKinnon are expected. Of last year's team only Torbet, end and half, and Barton, end, are here, although "Bubbles" Paterson and Guard Quinn are expected tonight.

Chance to Quit Cubs at Close of Season

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Frank L. Chance will quit the management of the Chicago Cubs at the end of the present season. This announcement was made by Charles F. Murphy, president of the club, today. The announcement coming after the controversy between Murphy and Chance over the new temperance edict of the club caused excitement among the fans here.

DAVE SMITH WILL MEET HOUCK HERE

Alex McLean, the matchmaker of the Pilgrim A. C., has decided to use Dave Smith, the middleweight champion of Australia, and Leo Houck of Philadelphia in place of Jimmy Clabby, who flunked out of the match at the last moment, for the show on next Wednesday night. Smith will arrive in town tomorrow afternoon and will work out at the clubhouse. The bout was originally scheduled for Tuesday evening, but Houck asked for an extra day, so as to be in the best of condition when he tackled the Australian chappion.

FALL LACROSSE WORK TO START AT HARVARD

Fall practice for the university lacrosse team at Harvard will commence Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock on Soldiers Field. A series of scrub games will be played this Fall in competition for a cup offered by R. A. Wood, a former manager of the lacrosse team. The only other contest of importance this Fall will occur October 2, when a selected team will line up against a team composed of crack players from among the graduates. The captain of the varsity team this year is R. S. Simmons '13, who prepared at the Boston Latin School.

SEEKS MOTOR CYCLE RECORD TO CHICAGO

Harry De Turck of Los Angeles, who has been touring the country on a motor cycle, left the Boston AMERICAN office at 4:20 this morning, in an attempt to establish a record for a motor cycle between this city and Chicago. Truck will pass through Buffalo, and expects to make the trip to the Windy City in two and a half days.

FREE RUSH FOR 20,000 TICKETS

Twenty thousand tickets are to be placed on sale before each game of the World Series in this city, so cheer up, you fans, there is still hope that you will be able to witness the great contests.

There will be, perhaps, nearly 40,000 wildly excited fans after these tickets, so it means one wild scramble for the valuable pasteboards. The number which are to be placed on sale at the box office at Fenway Park is much larger than was expected. So now, nearly 20,000 local fans will be able to pat themselves on the back at their good fortune.

Many of the fans no doubt will be found camping out in front of Fenway Park, forty-eight hours before the game is scheduled to start. Others will adopt more modern methods and hire small boys and messengers to wait in line for them. First come, first served will be the motto, and after the 20,000 tickets for the unreserved sections are passed over, the remainder of the throng will have to hear the game from outside. There will be no chance of seeing it, on the inside.

The official announcement has been made by the club, that all applicants who have been assigned reserved seats for the three games in this city, will be able to get them the next Friday, October 4. All reserved seats have been sold, so there will be no public sale of seats in that section of the big stands.

Secretary McRoy said:

"There will be no public sale of reserved seats to Fenway Park. Every reserved seat will be allotted on mail applications. We have completed the allotment for the box seats, and we fully expect the mail on hand will take care of all our reserved seats in the main grandstand and the new additional seats at third base.

"The club realizes that a great many good fans will be disappointed in not receiving the tickets they have asked for, as there is not room for every one, but our efforts have been made to make them go as far as possible.

"Do not forget that there will be nearly 20,000 unreserved seats placed on sale the day of each game."

CADETS WIN BIG TROPHY AT SHOOT

TUFTS SQUAD LEAVES.

DELEGATES TO SEE HARVARD FOOTBALL

Many delegates attending the commercial congress will see the Harvard-Maine game in the Harvard Stadium today. There are many foreign delegates who have never seen an American football game.

WILLIE LEWIS BACK.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 28.—Two boys, aspiring for top honors in the middleweight class, Willie Lewis of New York and Tommy Gavigan of Cleveland, have been matched for twelve rounds before the Tuxedo Club here on October 8. They are to fight at 159 pounds.

Eddie Plank Also Picks the Red Sox

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 28.—Eddie Plank, the great southpaw of the Athletics, declares that the Red Sox will beat the Giants in the world's series because of a better pitching staff.

"The difference between the New York and the Boston pitching staff," he said, "is that Boston has five men she can trust. New York has two and a youth who has just shown himself. Ray Collins, Charles Hall, Hugh Bedient, Buck O'Brien and Joe Wood are all corking pitchers. Marty was said may be still. Marquard is uncertain and Tesreau is verdant. Marquard may again be a wonder. Matty shows his old-time form, especially if he gets a good start. And Tesreau may be the hero of the series, but I like the Red Sox' pitchers, for they are all good and when one fails Manager Stahl has four to fall back on, or he can use two per game and have ample timber left for the rest of the series.

"Bill Carrigan, the Boston catcher, helps his pitchers as much as any catcher I know, because he is not always calling for 'pitch-outs' to catch the batter. He throws so well that he takes the gamble of letting them if they steal.

Extra Inning Game May End Jim Scott

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Jim Scott has probably pitched his last game of the season as a member of the White Sox brigade. Scott still absent himself from the Sox ranks for an indefinite period because of a suspension handed down by Manager Callahan.

The reason assigned for Scott's layoff is failure to keep in playing condition. The Virginia lankster has been of no use to the Sox since the first of the season. When he pitched a fifteen-inning no-score tie against Baumgartner at St. Louis.

He developed rheumatism a few days after this performance and then spent most of the Summer in attempting to get back into shape. According to Callahan, however, the big hurler showed no inclination to buckle down to work.

DISTANCE RUNNERS OUT AT HOLY CROSS

WORCESTER, Sept. 28.—Bart Sullivan, coach of the Holy Cross track team, has issued the first call for the cross-country team. Costa, Daly, Harkins, Hogan, Reilly, Sullivan, old men; O'Brien of Lawrence High, Cooney of St. Louis High and Covecy of Boston College High, reported.

WHITE SOX PLAY CUBS FOR TITLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—President Comiskey of the Chicago American League Club has accepted the challenge of President Murphy of the Chicago Nationals for a series of games to decide the baseball championship of Chicago. Details will be arranged today.

BRITONS WANT MONEY.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The British Olympic Council has issued its official report on the Stockholm games. It is signed by Lord Desborough and Mr. Robert R. Gale of Canada. The leading point as set forth in that report is the need of national support and more money for training purposes. It is contended that it was not mere specialization that enabled the United States and Sweden to do better than England in the games, and that the great factor in the excellence of American teams lies in the existence of institutions throughout the United States modelled after the New York Athletic Club.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 28.—Although the Yale football coaches determined to regard sentorial courtesy and started veteran players in the Wesleyan game that opened the season here last Wednesday, they have decided to play the team for the Holy Cross battle here today just as Jake Stahl selects his daily batteries.

They held a dress rehearsal early today, looked the squad over and selected the eleven who looked prime.

Several former varsity players were missing from the line-up, including Phillips, Harbison, Romeiser and "Bunny" Warren. "Nick" Carter, freshman of last year, was given a trial at end. Talbot, tackle for the freshman eleven, was assigned to Harbison's beat, and Pumpelly, also of the freshmen last season, started the game at fullback.

Talbot ran through the signal drill today with a bruise covering several inches on his face. Markle, who kicked the field goal against Wesleyan, was given the first chance as punting halfback in place of Warren.

Cornish, who was something of a disappointment against Wesleyan, will be used pointment against Wesleyan, was used preference over York at right guard.

Lipton Coming But Do Not Expect Challenge

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Sir Thomas Lipton will arrive in New York within a week or so, but that he will submit to the New York Yacht Club a proposition calling for a modification of the conditions governing contests for the America Cup, which, if acted upon favorably, would be followed up by a challenge, is thought by members of the club to be improbable as regards the challenge.

A challenge for the America Cup from Mr. E. Mackay Edgar, whose power boat Maple Leaf IV. lifted the British international trophy in the recent races on the Solent, Bay, is considered to be another improbability, although it has received more than passing notice.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

My husband is always so sin-ickal, sed Missus White to Ma & Pa & me last nite. Wun we wuz out for a ride. He knows a lot of them nice fellers that keeps them amusement places, but he dosent want to go to them because he says that he dosent like crowds. I wish he cud be more like yure husband, Missus White sed to Ma. I can tell from the look of yure husband's square chin & square shoulders that he dont like crowds.

Then Pa begun to walk his chin & his shoulders look squarer & his chest look rounder, like a bull-dog, Missus White, you are rite, Pa sed. I do not feer crowds & I do not feer anything, for the matter of that. Long years of facing perils has made me a stranger to feer in every form, Pa sed.

Isent that sweet? sed Missus White to Ma. I shud think you wud be so proud of yure noable husband. How grand it must be to think you are wed to a man whose hart is a hart of steel, Missus White sed. My husband, on the other hand, she told Ma, is the tipe of a man who does snarling enuff at home, but who wud run from any man that is bigger than he is. I'll bet yure husband wud never run from a bigger man, sed Missus White.

I shud say he wuddent, wud he, Bobbie, sed Ma to me. Ma was winking at me & grinning so the others cuddent see it. But he has often ran from a smaller man, hasent he, Bobbie?

Why, wife, what do you mean? sed Pa. I hope you dosent want ever dend to think that I know what feer is. Big or small, short or tall, sed Pa, bring on yure men and I will slam them crowds rite & left.

Just then we got to where we were going, & after we had got off the car Pa kep talking to Missus White about how he reered no living man. He was telling Missus White how he had been in Patagonia & Uru-guay & Para-guay & in the South Sea Islands & all the far places of the earth, & Ma & me was walking behind and listening & laffing.

He is a grand old bluffer, isent he, Bobbie? sed Ma to me. Just think how afrade Missus White's husband wud be of him if he cud chanst to run along the street now & see our husband & father walking with his wife.

I dosent know, mother, I sed, sumtimes I think that father wud be a pritty dangerous man in a scrap, after all. I was reeding in a book rote by a grate poeter, I told Ma, that lots of men wich talked loud & hard fought louder & harder, I sed.

Jest then there was three men calm up & pushed Pa & Missus White off the side-walk into the street, wich is a very wrong thing to do. Pa went after them three men & beefore I cud get there to help him there wasent any use, Pa had beaten all of them up as easy as the pro-bibition party is going to lose.

Fine, fine, you darling boy, you are a hero and you won; sed Ma.

I suppose so, sed Pa. Anybody can be a hero after he had won!

Not a Waiter.

Armed with guns and huge game bags, the two Irishmen sallied forth in search of sport. It was their first venture at shooting, and they were dreadfully keen.

Suddenly Casey spotted a bird, and, taking careful aim, prepared to fire the fatal shot. Then Pat seized him by the arm frantically.

"For mercy's sake, don't fire, Casey!" he yelled. "Sure, an' ye've forgotten to load yer gun!"

"That's as may be, my lad," retorted Casey, "but fire I must. Begorrah, the bird won't wait!"

Is Cooking a Lost Art to Americans?

Delicatessen Has Taken Place of Grandma's Cook Stove, Professor Says

COOKING, the real home cooking, such as mother and grandmother used to indulge in, is a lost art to Americans.

The delicatessen store with its prepared ham, smoked fish and other delectables, has taken the place of grandmother's old-fashioned cook stove.

Never more will we hear the oft-repeated complaint of the newly wed husband of the "cakes that mother used to bake."

Yes, it's all true, dear reader, and we have the word of Professor Max Rubner, of the University of Rouen, who, with 3,000 other eminent students of hygiene and demography, has been attending the world convention in Washington, D. C., this week.

False Pride a Factor

That not only is cooking a lost art, but that false pride is a dominant factor in the high cost of living, and that the dread of hunger is one of the potent forces of socialism, were a few of the other declarations of Dr. Rubner in his address to the world congress.

"The devitalization of the workingman, through undernutrition," Dr. Rubner declared, "is a world-wide subject fit for discussion. Proper nourishment for the human race would constitute a long step forward in the abolishing of the under-world."

The modern woman spends too much time hunting the fashion books and millinery windows in quest of style instead of studying the latest cook books and the arrangements of the new cook stove.

But few of the girls who marry these days, Dr. Rubner pointed out, enter into the bonds of matrimony with the same purpose as that of the girl of two or three decades ago.

"They marry," Professor Rubner declared, "and take upon themselves the responsibility of marriage without the first principles of food preparation, and without even having an idea as to which articles of food are desirable. This condition of affairs should not be permitted to exist, and it is a most important factor in the present high cost of living. The kitchen is a fascinating place to me. If I could live long enough I should like to spend ten years devoted to its study.

"Housekeeping is a noble art and one of the best methods for correcting the terrible deficiencies of race nourishment. To establish a course of housekeeping in our public schools would be fine. Girls of fourteen and fifteen should be taught the arts of food preparation and plain, old-fashioned cooking."

Malnutrition of children, Professor Rubner stated, has reached such a point that if this or any other country wishes to preserve its future generations it must make a careful and prolonged study of present day conditions.

"Otherwise," said Professor Rubner, "there will be no hope of saving the human race from degeneration.

"One of the greatest, if not the greatest, of problems now confronting mankind is that of providing the race with proper nourishment. It is of such importance, in fact, that every large city should have a department in its government invested with the plenary powers of this branch of the people's welfare.

Meat and Prosperity

"In Germany there has long been a marked difference in the cuisine of the workingman," continued Professor Rubner, "of the middle man and the so-called upper classes. The middle class meal in the past was always distinguished by the quantity of relatively cheap foods rather than by the quality or variety. Until quite recently meat was an unknown visitor at the workingman's table, but with the increase of urban population and the growth of the initiative spirit the workingman has come now gradually to insist on meat.

"This is not because it is needed or performs any indispensable food function, but because it is a mark of prosperity. Not to have meat at one's table at all is regarded by the workingman as a confession of poverty; to have it often, a badge of wealth."

Beware the Tempting Oyster

HE OFTEN CARRIES TYPHOID AND DEATH IN HIS PEARLY SHELL AT THIS SEASON OF THE YEAR

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

NOW that the months with the "R" in them have come back everybody should pay heed to what Dr. Wiley says in the September number of Good Housekeeping Magazine about the peril in eating raw oysters at this time of year.

An oyster in its uncooked state probably approaches nearer in appearance to pure protoplasm than any other popular food—protoplasm, you will remember, is that peculiar substance which Huxley called "the physical basis of life." Whatever its nutritive elements may be, the oyster is certainly as nutritious as it is toothsome, but, unfortunately, it is peculiarly subject to become the bearer of some very dangerous diseases, and especially of the dreaded typhoid. Only a thorough cooking can render an oyster in the Autumn months safe to eat. You may eat a thousand without contracting disease, and the thousand-and-oath may stretch you on a sick bed or take away your life. Luckily, oysters are extremely good when cooked, and if they have been sufficiently cooked the germs that they often carry are killed.

Later in the season, as Dr. Wiley points out, the danger is eliminated or almost eliminated, and during the Winter oysters, if they are freshly taken from their beds, may be safely consumed raw. The reason why the danger is so much greater in the early Autumn months is, we are told, because during the Summer the waters in which oysters breed are peculiarly liable to become contaminated with refuse from neighboring cities, charged with the germs of the most fatal disease. As time goes on and the waters become clearer and the germs perish the oysters no longer feed upon material capable of rendering them perilous to the health of the consumer. The danger of contamination can be avoided by a careful selection and supervision of the beds, but whoever knows or takes the trouble to inquire whence his oysters have come? And if he did inquire, what chance would he have of learning the exact truth? Oysters are dredged to sell!

How imminent this peril to health and life is may be judged by the fact, which Dr. Wiley records, that in October, a year ago, a severe epidemic of typhoid fever followed a supper at a little town in New York State, where raw oysters formed the principal dish, and a careful investigation traced the trouble to those oysters. Remember, then, if you are tempted to eat raw oysters in September or October, that you are far more likely to swallow the germs of typhoid than to find a valuable pearl.

Our American oysters differ widely, in appearance and taste, from those which are popular in western Europe. Some of the European oysters are very large and flat. In Paris there are restaurants where, at this season, enormous quantities of large oysters, called marennes, are consumed raw. People flock to them in crowds and have to wait their turn at the tables. It is a spectacle to make the visitor open his eyes to see a young lady with her escort, seated at a small table, each having a huge platter, heaped high with enormous flat oyster shells, apparently enough to feed a family of ten. But not an oyster remains on either platter when the feast is finished. Another curious thing to American eyes is to see the convives taking the big shells in their hands, like saucers, and drinking the abundant juice of the oyster before consuming the meat. It is very good, too.

A Rash Awakening.

Sleeping on a mat under the moon in a cannibal country is a pale advance compared with a lodge in an old-time Irish inn at the height of the tourist season.

A certain master of the Galway Hunt arrived at a small inn where all the beds were already taken. A kitchen table was relinquished, a heterogeneous collection of bedclothes being arranged upon it into the exact nature of which it was perhaps not well to inquire too closely, as it seemed to be composed of contributions from the wardrobe of the hotel help, and the sportsman turned in.

The pillow was an odd-shaped substance, emitting a faint and strangely familiar odor; but the Master of the Galway Blazers was too weary to concern himself over such trifles, and he slept as soundly on his makeshift couch as if it had been a canopied bed of state.

He was awakened in the morning by a gentle fumbling at the wrapping beside his couch, and started up to see a gleaming knife suspended above his head.

"I'm sorry to be disturbin' ye, sir," said an apologetic voice, "but sure th' house was out iv pillows intirely, an' we put th' side iv bacon under yr honor's head. I was just conthrivin' to get a few rashers off for th' quality's breakfast without disturbin' ye, whin yr honor woke up."

Household Hints

To remove fruit stains from table cloths, cover with powdered starch and leave this on the stain for a few hours. All the discoloration will then be absorbed by the starch.

A silk blouse should never be put into boiling water, for this gives the silk a yellow tinge and impoverishes the material. Dip it into a strong lather of tepid water and squeeze it well, but do not on any account rub it or soap the silk. Use several rinsing waters, for if the soap is not quite washed out the silk will harden, and into the last rinsing water of all put a little methylated spirit, and if the silk is white a few drops of pale blue may be added. Remember that all silk blouses must be ironed while they are damp; if they are too wet they will turn yellow.

Smoke from a lamp or gas often soils a ceiling in one particular spot, while the rest remains beautifully white. It is useful to know that soiled ceilings caused by lamp and gas will be rendered less conspicuous if rubbed over with dry whiting.

Many people dislike stoning raisins because of the unpleasant stickiness. This can be prevented by rubbing a little butter on your fingers and on the knife before beginning.

Widows

By Dorothy Dix

"I SEE," said the woman in white, "that a priest in Massachusetts has preached a sermon in which he exhorted the widows in his congregation to stand aside and give the young girls a chance to secure such husbands as are floating around loose in that community."

"Well, you haven't heard of any of the widows taking his advice, have you?" inquired the woman in blue.

"No, and you won't," said the girl in the pink hat; "widows are pirates, and those long veils they wear are nothing but the black flags that they nail to their masts, showing that they are going to give no quarter."

"Widows are a queer proposition," said the woman in white in a speculative tone. "Why is it, for instance, that we speak of a woman of forty who has never been married as an old maid, while we call a woman of forty who has lost her husband, a young widow? Also, it is true that a woman who reaches the age of forty-five without ever having been married, practically has no chance whatever of ever getting married, but a widow of forty-five can marry two or three times more if she wants to.

"And the two women may be equally good looking, and equally well off financially, and equally charming and intelligent. You wouldn't think that the fact that a woman had been married would enhance the value of her matrimonial stock, but it does. Even a widow with children can marry all around a spin, and give the prettiest young girl a run for her money. I wonder why this is thus?"

"Pooh," replied the woman in blue scornfully, "that's easy. The widow is the matrimonial professional, while the spin is the amateur, and, other things being anywhere near equal, the professional always wins out. Any woman, not a fool, who has been married, knows men and their little peculiarities and weaknesses, and how to work them as no unmarried woman possibly can.

The Difference

"Did you ever notice the difference between the way a widow and a young girl talk to a man? The young girl babbles along about the things she's interested in. She talks about the books she's read, the people she's met, the parties she's been to, and the men she's danced with, and she's even idiotic enough to break out paens of praise of some particular youth that she thinks is a perfect demigod.

"If the girl is pretty enough the man will listen to her with a distrait and bored air, but you can see him writhing in his chair, and it doesn't need a prophet to tell you that he's not going to get caught that way again if he can help it.

"But behold the widow and the man together! You will observe that he is doing the talking, and that she is listening with a rapt expression about himself, and his business, and his automobile, and the places he's been to, and the witty things he said, and the good times he had.

"And the widow only quite in enough words to keep him going, and to indicate what a marvelous conversationalist she thinks he is. And never, never, never will you find a widow outside of the Home for the Feeble Minded who is indiscreet enough to praise one man to another. She remembers how her poor, dear, departed John took it when she was incautious enough to admire some other man than himself.

"Moreover, the young girl and the spin both expect a lot of men. They represent the romantic fiction theory of how men ought to treat a woman, while the widow exemplifies the real facts in the case.

Expect Too Much

"They expect a man to pay them compliments, to send them flowers, to write them notes, and to generally dance attendance upon them. On the other hand, the widow knows that no matter how much a man loves a woman, there is nobody that he always loves a thousand times better, and that's himself. So, instead of waiting to be flattered, she gets busy herself with the bot air machine; instead of demanding to be entertained she does the entertaining; instead of expecting the man to do things for her she cossets, and pets, and fusses over him.

"Above all, the woman who has been married, if she has a grain of sense in her head, has learned not to argue, and to keep her opinion to herself when it differs from a man's. Also, by the time she's killed off one husband with dyspepsia, a woman has learned to cook and keep house, and for these and sundry other reasons a widow is a preferred matrimonial risk, and a man shows good judgment when he marries one."

"I suppose that a wife who has cut her wisdom teeth on matrimony, so to speak, would be easier to get along with than one who went into it just sloshing over with all the grand and noble and impossible ideals that we all have as brides," said the woman in white.

"That's right," responded the woman in gray, "when I think of the blue china I made my poor husband live up to when we were first married, and the barrels of tears I shed because he was just human and not a plaster saint, I wonder he didn't divorce me. That's where a widow wins out. She's been through the teething, and mumps, and measles and other infantile ailments stage of matrimony, and knows enough to drive with a light rein, and that there's no use in worrying over the state of a man's affection, so long as he pays the bills without grumbling."

"I wonder why people marry the second time?" said the girl in the pink hat.

"You remember Dr. Johnson's explanation," replied the woman in white. "He said it was the triumph of hope over experience."

"Nonsense," exclaimed the woman in blue, "men and women who marry the second time do it for the same reason. They miss having somebody to knock their faults."

Sent to the Mat

A great lover of animals, Professor Dryasdust was much given to having his pet dog sitting beside him at meal times and eating tid-bits from his own little plate.

One evening he was at a dinner party, and his partner was a very great lady, who was proud of her title.

But the professor paid absolutely no attention to her. His mind had switched off on to some abstruse point, and he was lost to the world over the problem.

The Duchess did not approve of this, and presently, to attract his attention, she pulled him gently by the sleeve.

Then the professor woke up. Grabbing a half-picked chicken bone from his plate, he thrust it under her startled nose.

"Don't bother just now, Fido!" he said curtly. "Here, take this and go and eat it on the mat, like a good doggie!"

WOMAN SICK TWELVE YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She Was Finally Restored to Health.

Louisiana, Mo.:—"I think a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but complete restoration to health means so much to me that I cannot keep from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women.

"I had been sick about twelve years, and had eleven doctors. I had dragging down pains, pains at monthly periods, bilious spells, and was getting worse all the time. I would hardly get over one spell when I would be sick again. No tongue can tell what I suffered from cramps, and at times I could hardly walk. The doctors said I might die at one of those times, but I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got better right away. Your valuable medicine is worth more than gold to suffering women."—Mrs. Bertha Muff, 503 N. 4th Street, Louisiana, Mo.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

We challenge anyone to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

FEEL SHAKY, BILIOUS, HEADACHY, OR CONSTIPATED? TAKE CASCARETS

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out of the bowels. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organisms are especially prone to sick headaches need but one, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too—they love them because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

MOST of the compliments paid Father by any member of his family have no impediment tied to them as big as the can that is tied to a dog's tail.

"Father is a good man," one of the family will say, "but"——

Then the others will sigh, and agree with the "but."

It was while Daysey Mayme Appleton was thinking kindly that her father was a good man that she offered one evening to sing for him.

It was a rare concession, and he trotted into the parlor, greatly pleased.

Daysey Mayme was most kind for she remembered that "Father is a good man." She would let him select the songs.

"I like 'Pass Under the Rod,'" he said settling down in his chair for a treat.

That old thing; she wouldn't sing it! "The Little Brown Church in the Vale" was another favorite, he told her, cheerfully.

She tried to remember that "Father is a good man," and said patiently that no one sang that these days. Oh, yes, she had the music somewhere, but she wouldn't he caught dead while singing a song as old as that.

"Ring the Bell, Softly, There's a Crepe on the Door," he said was his greatest favorite. He remembered when her mother used——

Daysey Mayme interrupted him by bursting forth into a song called "The Christening of Abraham Lincoln Jones."

Lysander John listened patiently. "It is good, I suppose," he said, when she had finished, "but won't you sing this?" handing her "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Daysey Mayme laughed in derision, and turning to the piano, gave him five verses of "When We Dance the Cabbage Leaf Rag."

Then in rapid succession she sang "The Big Cry Baby in the Moon," "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," and "Everybody's Doing It," turning around when she had concluded, to find her father had left the room.

"Father is a good man," she said to her mother a little later, "but"——

And her mother sighed, and agreed with her.

Too Affectionate

HE has just returned from his Summer holiday, and was telling a friend of his all about it.

"Yes," he was saying airily, "I've been over to France. I had a fine time, and—I must tell you—I saw a duel."

"Oh!" said his friend eagerly, "One of those duels, eh? I don't suppose anybody was hurt very much! Those French duels are simply affairs."

"You're quite wrong!" replied the other "One of the combatants was seriously injured. He had a rib broken."

"Rib broken! What, with one of those little toy rapiers?"

"Rapiers?" asked the man who had come from France. "Who said rapiers? The brave man's rib was broken in the encounter with his opponent when the duel was over!"

PART I.—(Continued)

SUDDENLY Mr. Challoner spoke:

"Who is the man whom Mr. Brotherton has asked to go up with me?"

It was Oswald who answered:

"He has never told me. He has kept his own counsel about that as about everything else connected with this matter. He simply advised me that I was not to bother about him any more; that he had found the assistant he wanted."

"Such reticence seems unpardonable. You have displayed great patience, Oswald."

Doris Frightened

"Because I understand Orlando. He reads men's natures like a book. The man he trusts, we may trust. Tomorrow, he will speak openly enough. All cause for reticence will be gone."

"You have confidence then in the success of this undertaking?"

"If I hadn't, I should not be here. I could hardly bear to witness his failure, even in a secret test like this. I should find it too hard to face him afterward."

"I don't understand."

"Orlando has great pride. If this enterprise fails I cannot answer for him. He would be capable of anything. Why, Doris! what is the matter, child? I never saw you look like that before."

She had been down on her knees regulating the lantern, and the sudden flame, shooting up, had shown him her face turned up toward his in an apprehension which verged on horror.

"Do I look frightened?" she asked, remembering herself and lightly rising, "I believe that I am a little frightened. If—if anything should go wrong! If an accident"——

But here she remembered herself again and quickly changed her tone. "But your confidence shall be mine. I will believe in his good angel so—or in his self-command and great resolution. I'll not be frightened any more."

But Oswald did not seem satisfied. He continued to look at her in vague concern.

He hardly knew what to make of the intense feeling she had manifested. Had Orlando touched her girlish heart? Had this cold-blooded nature, with its steel-like brilliancy and honorable but stern views of life, moved this warm and sympathetic soul to more than admiration? The thought disturbed him so he forgot the nearness of the moment they were all awaiting till a quick, rasping sound from the hangar, followed by the sudden appearance of an ever-widening band of light about its upper rim, drew his attention and awakened them all to a breathless expectation.

The lid was rising. Now it was halfway up, and now, for the first time, it was lifted to its full height and stood a broad oval disc against the background of the forest. The effect was strange. The hangar had been made brilliant by many lamps, and their united glare pouring from its top and illuminating not only the surrounding treetops but the broad face of this uplifted disc, roused in the awed spectator a thrill such as in mythological times might have greeted the sudden sight of Vulcan's smithy blazing on Olympian hills. But the clang of iron on iron would have attended the flash and gleam of those unexpected fires, and here all was still save for that steady throb never heard in Olympus or the halls of Valhalla, the pant of the motor eager for flight in the upper air.

As they listened in a trance of burning hope which obliterated all else, this noise and all others near and distant, was suddenly lost in a loud clatter of writhing and twisting boughs which set the forest in a roar and seemed to leave the air about them.

The Flight

A wind had swooped down from the east, bending everything before it and rattling the huge oval on which their eyes were fixed as though it would tear it from its hinges.

The three caught at each other's hands in dismay. The storm had come just on the verge of the enterprise, and no one might guess the result.

"Will he dare? Will he dare?" whispered Doris, and Oswald answered, though it seemed next to impossible that he could have heard her:

"He will dare. But will he survive it? Mr. Challoner," he suddenly shouted in that gentleman's ear, "what time is it now?"

Mr. Challoner, disengaging himself from their mutual grasp, knelt down by the lantern to consult his watch.

"One minute to eight," he shouted back.

The forest was now a pandemonium. Great boughs, split from their parent trunk, fell crashing to the ground in all directions. The scream of the wind roused echoes which repeated themselves here, there and everywhere. No rain had fallen yet, but the sight of the clouds scurrying pellmell through the glare thrown up from the shed, created such havoc in the already overstrained minds of the three onlookers, that they hardly heeded, when with a clatter and crash which at no other time would have startled them into flight, the swaying oval before them was whirled from its hinges and thrown back against the trees already bending under the onslaught of the tempest. Destruction seemed the natural accompaniment of the moment, and the only prayer which sprang from Oswald's lips was that the motor whose throb yet lingered in their blood though no longer taken in by the ear, would either refuse to work or prove insufficient to lift the heavy car into this seething tumult of warring forces. His brother's life hung in the balance against his fame, and he could not but choose life for him. Yet, as the multitudinous sounds about him yielded for a moment to that brother's shout, and he knew that the moment had come, which would soon settle all, he found himself staring at the elliptical edge of the hangar, with an anticipation which held in it as much terror as joy, for the end of a great hope or the beginning of a great triumph was compressed into this trembling instant, and if—

Great God! He sees it! They all see it! Plainly against that portion of the dim which still lifted itself above the further wall, a curious moving mass appears, lengthens, takes on shape, then shoots suddenly aloft, clearing the encircling tops of the bending, twisting and tormented trees, straight into the heart of the gale, where for one breathless moment it whirls madly about like a thing distraught, then in slow but triumphant obedience to the master hand that guides it, steadies and mounts majestically upward till it is lost to their view in the depths of impenetrable darkness.

Orlando Brotherson has accomplished his task. He has invented a mechanism which can send an aircar straight up from its mooring place. As the three watchers realize this, Oswald utters a cry of triumph, and Doris throws herself into Mr. Challoner's arms. Then they all stand transfixed again, waiting for a descent which may never come.

His First Check

FARMER JOHN had taken his cattle to the market, sold them, and had been paid by check. This was the first time such a thing had happened.

"What's this?" he asked the dealer, as he was handed a slip of pink paper.

"Why, money for the beasts!" was the reply.

The farmer stared, but was finally assured that if he took it to the bank he would receive good rich gold in return.

The check was cashed and the farmer went away happy. But he couldn't sleep that night; the wonder of the thing excited him. As soon as morning broke he made for the cattle dealer's house.

"It's me!" he replied to the latter as he opened the door. "I want to know where I can get some more of those bits of pink paper."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE STREET, Sept. 28.—The Boston market was strong today and the volume of trading was considerable. There was more demand for coppers, and while gains were fractional, there were but few which did not advance.

United Fruit finished four points higher. The New York market was active and higher, sales for the morning amounting to more than 378,000 shares. The total for the week was 3,779,300. Bond sales for the week aggregated $14,196,000. Steel closed at 79¾. Most all the copper stocks ended the week with gains. The loan rate on Steel was 5% and on other stocks 5½ per cent.

The average statement for New York banks is as follows: Excess cash reserve, $6,350,000; decrease, $247,000; loans, decrease, $12,983,000; specie decrease, $2,-627,000; legal tenders, increase, $227,000; net deposits, decrease, $9,982,000; circulation, increase, $396,000. The actual statement is: Loans, decrease, $20,166,000; specie, decrease, $2,180,000; legal tenders, increase, $705,000; net deposits, decrease, $18,948,000; reserve increase, $2,127,500.

Thompson, Towle & Co. send today: "The present adversity of the so-called Dow properties may prove of great benefit to the Lake Copper Company. It is no secret at Houghton, Mich., that the failure of the management of the Lake Copper Company to acquire the adjoining properties to the north, south and west was a matter of considerable disappointment to the operating end, and it is agreed that the various operations surrounding the Lake property in Ontonagon County should be one development rather than a half-dozen. In fact, it has been stated by Lake Copper interests that Lake Copper Company could never be a large mine, owing to the peculiar formation of its lode within the narrow limits of its properties, unless it was able to combine with other properties. Possibly there will never be a better opportunity for the Lake Copper Company to enlarge than at the present time."

Big Sales of Copper.

Recent selling of copper has been upon a tremendous scale and one transaction of yesterday called for the delivery of 1,000,000 pounds in November. Another single sale of the same amount was for January. The price which generally prevailed was 17¾ cents a pound, but one big selling interest got 17.80 cents for the metal it sold yesterday. The buying was on both European and domestic count. In five days this week about 50,000,000 pounds of copper have been disposed of, with the period or deliveries covering six months. But the bulk of actual buying has been for November and December.

Financial News in Brief.

For August Erie's gross revenue increased $353,530 and its operating income $127,378. The surplus of the Reading Company for that month increased $1,-946,156. The Illinois Central's net corporate income shrank $7,848,896 within the last fiscal year because of the shopmen's strike, severe Winter weather and Spring floods.

It is said that the stock of the new tobacco combine to be capitalized at $50,000,000, and in which Daniel G. Reid is interested, will be divided into $20,000,-000 preferred and $30,000,000 common.

It is stated at Pittsburgh that the Steel Corporation will make the bulk of the 250,000 tons of rails ordered by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Commonwealth Trust Company has published a cardboard folder of pocket size which is called a "Presidential Forecast." Its chief feature is an exceedingly ingenious diagram in colors which shows how States voted at presidential elections since 1864. It presents other information very compactly.

United States Steel Corporation earnings for the current quarter are estimated as high as $31,500,000, but the common dividend went to the Harriman price of the year yesterday on the strength of the Wall Street belief that the showing will be at least $28,000,000.

The Indiana Pipe Line Company has increased its quarterly dividend from $3 to $4 a share, and this inspires the expectation that rates of other former Standard Oil subsidiaries will be raised. One is said to be earning 70 and another 40 per cent. a year upon present capitalization. There is certainly not much reason to fear "trust busting" when "competition" is so profitable.

Bank clearings at the leading cities of the United States, aggregating $2,897,581,-$70 for the week, according to Bradstreet's compilation, represent an increase of 8.7 per cent. over the same period last year and of 21.5 per cent. as compared with the same week in 1910.

In the market letter of one week ago, Hunt, Ellis & Company said about the United States Steel Corporation: "Steel earnings will show a very large increase during the last half of the current year, and prospects were never better. We cannot well see how any serious market set-back in the stock can be brought about under these conditions. We would buy Steel upon any very slight reaction."

Big Electric Show Will Open to Public at 7 This Evening

Tonight the 1912 Boston Electric Show will be opened in the Mechanics Building. At 8:30 o'clock the thousands of lights on the outside of the building and along Huntington avenue will be turned on. The doors will be opened at 7 o'clock. The show will go on until October 26, being open from 10 a. m. till 10:30 p. m.

All the exhibits are announced, may be seen as well in the daytime as at night, for the windows of the building will be darkened. The magnitude of the show is indicated by the fact that passes have been issued to 2,000 exhibitors and employes.

The management has made arrangements for the sale of tickets at more than forty stores throughout the territory served by the Boston Edison Company. These stores will be marked by an illuminated sign.

HOTEL STRIKERS MEET TONIGHT; MAY VOTE ON GENERAL STRIKE

A mass meeting of the hotel strikers will be held tonight in Faneuil Hall when it is expected a vote on a general strike will be taken.

Attorney-General Swift's opinion on the fifty-eight hour law applying to women in hotels will be discussed. It is expected. He ruled that the law forbidding women or minors under eighteen to work in mercantile establishments being employed more than fifty-eight hours a week, applies to the women and minors employed by hotels. He rules, however, that the section of the Acts of 1909 limiting the hours of women and minors employed in manufacturing and mechanical establishments to ten hours in any one day does not apply to hotels as a whole. This latter section was amended in 1911. Legislature to forbid more than fifty-four hours' employment in any one week.

J. REED WHIPPLE LEFT AN ESTATE WORTH $502,799

An inventory of J. Reed Whipple's estate has been filed with the Suffolk County Register of Probate, showing that he left personal property valued at $502,799.62, of which the greater part consists of preferred and common stock in the Touraine, Young's Hotel and the Parker House. His real estate consisted of a lot in Mt. Auburn Cemetery. It is asserted that the greater part of his vast estate had been distributed before his death. He owned 1,500 shares of preferred stock and 2,400 shares of the common stock of the hotels. The figures of the tax commissioner were used to gain a valuation. He valued the stock at $150 a share. None of it had ever been sold in the market.

GERMAN MEDAL FOR NORTHWESTERN R. R.

A commemorative medal has just been awarded to the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company by the International Exposition of Hygiene, at Dresden, in 1911, for the exhibit as displayed and interpreted by the American Museum of Safety in its specialized exhibit in Prevention of Accident. Industrial Hygiene and Safety Devices to this effect having been received from Arthur Williams, president of the American Museum of Safety, New York City. Medals are now being struck and will be forwarded shortly. This is the first instance on record of any such German exhibit having been installed in the Berlin Museum, and is an indication that the "safety" movement first started by the Chicago & Northwestern Railway and since largely followed and adopted by the railways of this country, is receiving attention abroad and may become a world-wide movement.

"The Chicken Was Sick, or the Farmer Was Sick"--

That Is What They USED to Say When the Farmer Ate a Chicken. Now the Farmer Eats Chickens That Are Not Sick. He Also Owns Automobiles

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Do not forget that the high cost of living, like the high cost of anything else, means that somebody IS GETTING MORE MONEY THAN HE USED TO GET.

The higher cost of living means, among other things, that the farmer who used to be on the verge of bankruptcy, loaded with mortgages and worries, is getting a great deal more than he used to get, and is happier than he used to be.

To emphasize the farmer's poverty, they used to say that when the farmer ate a chicken, "The chicken was sick, or the farmer was sick."

They meant that the farmer would not eat a chicken unless he himself were ill, or unless "the chicken was sick" and had to be eaten to prevent its dying and becoming a total loss.

Conditions have changed for the farmer. He now eats chickens that are hardy and flourishing. He no longer lives on skimmed milk and salt pork.

Agricultural machinery, and agricultural science taught in hundreds of admirable colleges, enable him to grow one hundred bushels where he used to grow fifty—and he gets more for each bushel.

Better roads—due largely to the bicycle and the automobile—make it easier for him to get his goods to market.

Farmers' unions, granges and other organizations have enabled the farmers to work together instead of being cheated separately—that has made better prices for the farmers, and better profits.

The rural free delivery, carrying the news of the day to the farmers, including the latest ideas in agriculture, and the latest prices of his products, has protected him against dishonest dealers.

The telephone, connecting the farms and the stores, has saved the farmer's time—and with the farmer especially time is money.

The telephone and the rural free delivery, by the way, have also cut down by about one-half the amount of insanity among farmers' wives.

The greatest wealth of the nation, incomparably, is the wealth that the farmer produces. This year, fortunately, is a year of wonderful crops. THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS HAVE BEEN GIVEN TO THE NATION BY THE FARMERS IN ACTUAL VALUE. THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS OF BUSHELS OF GRAIN HAVE BEEN TAKEN OUT OF THE FERTILE EARTH, TO FEED THE PEOPLE DIRECTLY, AND TO FEED AND FATTEN THE ANIMALS THAT THE PEOPLE WILL EAT.

The farmer's wife was once a poor, worn-out woman before she had reached thirty. Eighteen hours a day was her day's work in Summer. And her husband was little better off. The only excitement in the old days was the camp meeting, or some highly beneficial, but slightly doleful, prayer meeting once a week.

Now the farmer's wife, when her husband is an able man, has her literary and social club. Her daughter is lightly touching a real piano with intelligent fingers. And her grown-up son is working a mechanical musical instrument with his heavy feet.

There is a red automobile in the barn, "the folks" go into town to attend theatres, public meetings, and look around generally.

The life that once was the saddest, the hardest, the least remunerative of all, the life of a farmer, the life that was led in ignorance of the outside world, and of true farming itself, is rapidly becoming a life of independence, of happiness, a life guaranteed against want, a life that is really worth while, and toward which the weary dwellers in the cities begin by the millions to turn longing eyes.

When you think of the high cost of living, remember that in part, at least, the meaning of the higher prices is, THAT THE FARMER IS BEGINNING TO GET SOMETHING FOR HIS WORK.

No man grudges, or should grudge him that. When you read that pork "live weight," cattle "on the hoof," sell for prices higher than were ever known before, except in war time, you are reading that the men that actually produce the animals are getting something for their trouble.

No one grudges them that.

The duty of the citizen is to make sure the money spent on higher cost of living ACTUALLY GOES TO THE MAN WHO DOES THE WORK. The problem is not to cut down the farmer, not to put potatoes back to thirty cents a bushel, or corn to fifty cents.

The problem is to make sure that the farmer gets well paid for what he does; that the middle man, the railroad, those that handle what other men produce, and that create no values, do not get the largest part of it.

The high cost of living should make the thoughtful citizen do something better than merely complain. It is the duty of citizens in the big cities to unite, AS THE FARMERS HAVE UNITED, and by cheapening distribution of products and organizing sales on a big scale TO REDUCE THE PRICE WITHOUT INJURING THE FARMER'S PRODUCTS.

If the thoughtful citizen would, he could partly solve his own living problem, by getting away from the stone pavements, to a spot where his family might get fresh air, and where he, on a small and profitable scale, could be a PRODUCER of food.

Of the men fairly prosperous, living in the big cities, paying heavy prices for all that they eat, at least half and probably three-quarters, might without greater expense own a place of their own, instead of paying rent, and on that place, though it were small, produce enough actual food to take away from the cost of living that fifty per cent. added by the "increased cost" so much talked about.

STUDY OF FAMOUS PERSONS

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—In reply to your editorial request for prominent names of men and women to study, the following names I submit and thank you for all your helpful writings which reach more people daily than any others in the world. I also express my gratification in studying the development of George W. Perkins. He is raised right and a great present example to young men. Here is the list of men to study: Plato, Lincoln, Roosevelt. Women—Carrie Chapman Catt, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Annie Besant.

C. FLORENCE CHAMBERLIN.

Have You Ever Considered What It Would Mean to You to Lose Your Eyesight?

A Boston Girl HAS JUST HAD HER SIGHT RESTORED After Years of Total Darkness. SHE Knows How Much It Means to SEE, and Her Story Is WORTH CONSIDERING.

HAVE you ever considered what it would mean to you to lose your eyesight?

Most of us regard SIGHT as a matter of course.

It is difficult to realize what a hardship—what a handicap—it must be to suddenly have our sight taken away.

There is a girl in this city who has just had her sight restored after years of total darkness.

She was rendered blind by an accident years ago.

Today she sees clearly.

SHE knows how valuable SIGHT is.

She tells of her experiences, her long period of darkness and how sight was restored after years of hopelessness, in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

IT IS THE MOST AMAZING STORY THAT WILL BE PRINTED IN NEW ENGLAND TOMORROW.

* * *

And there is another sort of blindness which one might say affects all of us more or less.

Although we SEE, we OVERLOOK things.

Who knows how many times OPPORTUNITY has knocked at our doors and gone away unheard.

BLINDNESS TO OPPORTUNITY, however, can be OVERCOME.

Throughout New England there are hundreds of people with talents which could be turned to monetary account, but which are being wasted through fancied lack of opportunity.

EVERYBODY WANTS TO MAKE MONEY.

Perhaps YOU think you have no opportunity.

The Sunday AMERICAN thinks there is OPPORTUNITY for everyone somewhere and it is going to try to help its readers to find ways TO EARN MONEY AT HOME.

Perhaps—this refers to the ladies of course—you know how to cook something particularly well or preserve something or have some other household achievement which could be turned to account. EVERYBODY has to eat, and MOST everybody complains they would like to get this or that the same as mother used to make. All through New England there are good cooks—women talented in the fading arts of cookery who know how to preserve and bake and pickle and otherwise prepare things which people in the city cannot do but would like to eat.

Perhaps—this to the boys and girls—you have spare time which you could devote to selling something that would return you a good profit for your spare time.

Perhaps—this to the men—YOU can't find enough to occupy ALL your time.

Oh, there are HUNDREDS of things that the old world needs done, and YOU MAY BE JUST THE ONE to fill the bill.

Anyway, you'll find it beneficial to read the Sunday AMERICAN'S NEWEST department—"HOW TO EARN MONEY AT HOME."

* * *

Everyone who is interested in Ireland and Home Rule will be glad to hear that Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin will have a lengthy article in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN about the Great Irish Home Rule Convention just held in Philadelphia. Mr. Galvin attended the meeting as the representative of the Sunday AMERICAN and had the pleasure of several long talks with Mr. Redmond and other leaders in the movement.

* * *

There will be another of the series of pen and ink drawings of Historic Boston by the distinguished artist, Charles Arthur Lawrence, in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. This view shows the Charles River and the old Warren and Charlestown bridges—scenes of many events of deep interest to Bostonians who love their city. Former Mayor Samuel Abbott Green tells some interesting anecdotes in connection with the picture.

* * *

After considering these more serious matters one finds entertainment in the Sunday AMERICAN'S colored magazine section, where there is a most interesting two-page story, profusely illustrated with drawings of the things they did at Newport when

Mrs. Belmont, America's leading Suffragette, tried to teach her exclusive friends the charms of simple democracy.

"There on the beach they danced, in the light o' the moon, bunny hugs, turkey trots and the Arizona Anguish. It was a delightful evening—at 2 in the morning. The town folks and the fishermen were very pleased, too," says the article.

* * *

What more deeply concerns us than WHAT WE EAT?

Doctor Wiley started a world-wide movement when he began his campaign for pure food.

TRAFFICKERS IN ADULTERATIONS HAVE FOUND THAT NEW ENGLAND IS NO PLACE FOR THEM.

The AMERICAN tomorrow will have a page devoted to PURE FOOD. There will be something about what New England is doing in advancing the work and there will be several stories by Doctor Wiley—which will be of material help to New England housewives in showing them HOW to avoid impure and improper foods.

* * *

There is one Bostonian who gives a great deal of his time to the interest of his fellow man. He not only gives his time and services freely, but he actually PAYS his partners for all the time he takes for work outside of the business of his firm.

Rather unusual these days to hear of anything like that. Yet this man, who is Louis D. Brandeis, does it, and has done a great deal more for his fellow citizens than most of us have realized to date.

There will be a story in Sunday's AMERICAN which will make you wish there were more of Mr. Brandeis' type in current circulation among us.

* * *

Harvard has another prodigy. Every little while someone discovers a child wonder attending the university across the Charles.

The newest discovery is going to graduate before he gets his first pair of long trousers. Imagine it.

There will be a story of his achievements and strange experiences in Sunday's AMERICAN.

* * *

Perhaps you have noticed those bachelor stories which crop up every little while in the Sunday AMERICAN. One story leads to another until it must seem that all the bachelors in the State must have been accounted for.

But there has been discovered a bachelor who defies a whole college of girls.

He lives in Northampton. Imagine living in Northampton—with all those thousands of Smith College girls roaming around town in Leap Year, and still remaining a bachelor.

But PERHAPS he'll get caught when the Sunday AMERICAN tells all about him and his good and bad points.

* * *

There are other things in Sunday's AMERICAN—YOU'LL see them all tomorrow, when you get your paper. Those few who do not get the AMERICAN tomorrow have only themselves to blame.
